Fleet Menaces Athens, 2 Armies Clash; Turks And Bulgars Near War

$20,000,000 Added For Army of U. S.

Britain Challenges Nazi Isolation in Pact for Security.

Major developments yesterday in the turbulent Balkans and military affairs of the powers, were:

Loyal troops and revolutionaries—150,000 of them—fought in the deep snows of Greece's Macedonia while rebel sea forces, after seizing three islands, threatened to bombard Athens the capital.

Geneva heard the rumbling of war from Bulgaria and Turkey. Each country charged the other with preparations for war, and both gathered armed forces along their Greek borders.

Great Britain, by directing diplomats to visit Warsaw and Moscow in efforts to effect an European security, left Germany to decide whether she would remain isolated. London has shown extreme irritation over Reichfuhrer Hitler's cancellation of Sir John Simon's visit to discuss security.

The American Senate rejected an amendment aimed at the increase of 45,000 men in the standing Army.

Ghevghelli, Yugoslavia, March 7. A desperate battle between Greek loyal troops and fanatically zealous rebels got under way in the deep snows of eastern Macedonia tonight to the accompaniment of chattering machine guns and deep-throated artillery.

As the rebel sea forces apparently menaced Athens itself, Gen. George Kondylis sent his loyal troops smashing ahead through heavy drifts of snow at the rebels, entrenched in the lines held by the British during the World War.

Artillery and aerial bombardments, almost incessant during the last two days, had prepared the way for them. Kondylis, his last ultimatum flung down to the insurgents, seemed determined to carry out his threat to crush the revolt.

Rebels Take Three Islands.

Earlier the rebel fleet forced three Greek islands—Samos, Chios and Mytelene—to strike their colors. Reports reaching this frontier town said Admiral Demestichos wireless the Greek cabinet, threatening to bombard Piraeus, port of Athens, unless the government surrenders.

So hard-pressed was Premier P. Tsaldaris and the government at Athens, another report said, that it was contemplating calling former King George back to his vacant throne.

[Three Government destroyers poured a hail of shells upon the roofs of Canea, Crete, today, in a bombardment of the Venizelist headquarters sheltering the chiefs of the revolution, according to the United Press. Effect of the bombardment was not reported, but it appeared that the rebels had no answer to prior attack from the air, and that considerable damage was done by the loyalist air fleet.—Editor.]

First reports from the battlefront said the cold, frostbitten loyal army, spurred by Kondylis, advanced

Tabor Widow Frozen to Death At Mine, Her Riches Vanished

Beauty of 80's Found Alone and Broke in Tiny Shack.

By the Associated Press.

Leadville, Colo., March 7.—Elizabeth McCourt (Baby Doe) Tabor, faded beauty of a fabled past, was found frozen to death today in her shack at the Matchless Mine, where millions flowed when her late husband, H. A. W. Tabor, was a prince of the roaring 80s.

Wrinkled by her 73 years of spectacular living, she was lying on the floor of her one-room shanty dressed in the remnants of a wardrobe that once made her the best-dressed woman in Denver. Coroner James Corbett said she probably died about February 20.

Two neighbors, Tom French, a miner, and Sue Bonney, an old friend of the Tabors, discovered the body, blue and cold, when they went to the shack to learn why Mrs. Tabor had not been about for the last few days.

The door was locked from the inside. French and Miss Bonney broke a window to enter, attempted to revive her and then called the coroner.

Of the Tabor fortune, that once totaled millions, only two wrinkled dollar bills and a few small coins remained in the shack. Friends said she had no other resources.

The aged "Baby Doe" made good the promise to her husband on his death bed that she would guard with her life the famed Matchless Mine which produced a good share of the Tabor fortune.

"Hold on to the Matchless, never let it go," Tabor had whispered back in 1893.

Title to the silver mine passed to other hands long ago, but Mrs. Tabor insisted that she be permitted to remain in the shanty, and upon

Both Nations Mobilized at Greek Border; Crisis Alarms Geneva.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, March 7.—A Balkan crisis, giving rise to new war fears in Geneva, flared today in the wake of the Greek revolution as Bulgaria and Turkey hurled charges of war preparations at each other.

Bulgaria, in calling the situation to the attention of the League of Nations, said Turkey was concentrating troops along the Bulgarian frontier. The Turkish delegate replied that his nation could not remain indifferent to military measures Bulgaria was taking along the Greek frontier.

Cemal Husni, Turkey's permanent delegate at Geneva, accused Bulgaria of taking advantage of the situation in Greece to string troops along the frontier and then, by protesting to Geneva, of trying to throw the responsibility for the situation on Turkey.

Cites Entente Cordiale.

He reminded the world, in a statement to the press, that Turkey has an entente cordiale with Greece.

With the Anglo-German security negotiations interrupted, with disarmament efforts at an apparent impasse, with Italy mobilizing because of her controversy with Ethiopia, with all Europe steadily reinforcing or planning to reinforce armaments, Geneva saw in the Balkan crisis cause for grave concern.

In calling the attention of J. A. C. Avenol, league secretary general, to the Turkish concentration, the Bulgarian delegate, M. Atnonoff, said his nation would be obliged to appeal formally to the league for

Plans Moscow and Warsaw Peace Talks; Hitler May Be 'Out in Cold.'

By the Associated Press.

London, March 7.—Great Britain, in effect, put it up to Adolf Hitler tonight to decide whether he will isolate Germany from the proposed European security system.

The virtual challenge to the German Fuehrer came as Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, told the House of Commons that Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal and Britain's foremost disarmament expert, would visit Moscow and Warsaw regardless of what Berlin does about Simon's proposed visit to Germany.

Hitler called off his date with Simon originally set for today because, Berlin believed, he took umbrage at the British white paper issued Monday. It defended Britain's 1935 armaments increases and criticised German rearmament as endangering the continent's peace. A cold was Hitler's official explanation of the postponement.

Move Questioned.

On the heels of the controversy stirred up by the white paper both here and abroad, the government found itself in more hot water with the revelation that Eden, of lesser rank than Simon, is going alone to Poland and Russia instead of the foreign secretary.

"Is he (foreign secretary) aware that Russia might take it amiss that a minister not in the cabinet should visit Warsaw?" Sir Murdoch McKenzie Wood, Liberal, asked in the Commons.

"You should allow Russia to speak for itself," the foreign minister returned drily, asserting his con-

Death Revealed By Vacant Pew

Mrs. Archibald Small, 73, Died While Preparing to Attend Service.

Mrs. Archibald Small, 73, devout and active church member, was ready to attend Grace Church at Woodside, Md., Wednesday night. She failed to go.

Yesterday morning the church janitor, Quarles Fleet, called at her home at the request of the Rev. Frederick M. Marsh, the rector. There, on the floor of her bathroom, he found her—dead. Fully clothed, she apparently had died of a cerebral hemorrhage the night before, just as she was about to go to church, Dr. Marion Bankhead, of Kensington, Md., declared.

Mrs. Small was born in Washington. She moved to Woodside with her husband about 30 years ago. He died about 20 years ago and she had lived alone since.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Mary E. Groves and Mrs. George L. Baum, of Washington; a niece and four nephews.

Services will be held at Grace Church, Woodside, at 2 p. m. tomorrow, with burial in the church cemetery.

Stars of 'Met' Billed to Trill 'He Done Her Wrong' to Court

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—The aria of Augusta Pinza's $250,000 alienation of affections suit, with several Metropolitan Opera stars cast as major performers, was billed for Supreme Court today with t he filing of a complaint against Elizabeth Doman Rethberg, the soprano.

Mrs. Pinza charged Mme. Rethberg's charms were not limited to pleasing her public in the golden horseshoe, but were "wrongfully and willfully" exerted to entice her husband, Ezio Pinza, the Metropolitan basso, into a total breach of his marital contract.

Earlier Mme. Rethberg had posted $1,000 bond for her appearance in court, after a temperamental outburst in which she tore up a summons and threw it in the face of a process server.

To back her charges, Mrs. Pinza promised to summon such stars of the Metropolitan as Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Lawrence Tibbett, Giovanni Martinelli and the Ponselle sisters.

The complaint alleged that for almost a year, beginning in romantic Florence, Italy, Mme. Rethberg continued to win Pinza's affections, stopping at the same hotel, dining in the same restaurants and entertaining him overnight in her Riverdale home.

Mme. Rethberg's attorneys countered with a statement that the relationship between the two singers was purely an admiration of each other's artistic abilities.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 7.—The death of Elva Statler Davidson, 22-year-old heiress and bride of two months, remained an official mystery tonight after a baffled coroner's jury had rendered what is known in North Carolina as an open verdict.

It found that the young woman, wife of H. Bradley Davidson, jr., of Washington, had come to her death by "carbon monoxide poisoning under circumstances unknown to the jury."

A similar verdict was returned by a coroner's jury in the death of Smith Reynolds, heir to a North Carolina tobacco fortune.

Today's verdict returns the case into the hands of Solicitor Rowland Pruette and Sheriff Charles McDonald. "So far as I am concerned," Pruette said, "any further action is up to the grand jury. I am leaving for my home in Wadesboro immediately. The grand jury has a regular term in May, but they can meet in special session any time they want to."

McDonald, however, said tonight that he will continue the investigation into the death of Mrs. Davidson, adding that he would accept the assistance of private detectives employed by the Statler estate.

He will cooperate with L. P. Whitleaf, of Atlanta, district manager of the Burns Detective Agency, who has been here at the behest of Buffalo attorneys representing the Statler family. Whitleaf said tonight that he would remain in Pinehurst until the conflicting circumstances and the aura of mystery had been cleared.

Whitleaf was joined today by "Buck" Healy, Burns representative from Buffalo, famous character of northern New York.

Davidson was not in the makeshift courtroom when the jury filed back, after deliberating a bare 15 minutes over the conflicting testimony presented to them during the three-day hearing. He was seated outside in his automobile and the news was carried to him by his brother, Richard Davidson, who was in attendance with his wife,

Campbell Sets Speed Record; Life in Danger

Loses Control of Bluebird for Instant; New Mark, 276.816 M. P. H.

By the Associated Press.

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 7. The sands of time were swept away by a thundering demon today as Sir Malcolm Campbell's Bluebird roared down the Daytona straightaway to a new world's automobile speed record—276.816 miles an hour.

It was far short of the 300-mile goal Campbell has set for himself and the 7-ton Bluebird, his land rocket, but it was 4.708 miles an hour swifter than the 272.108 mile average he traveled in establishing the old mark here two years ago.

It was an unexpected sortie, result of a last minute decision to wait no longer for the beach to smooth to the perfection needed for 300 miles an hour. The result left Campbell happy, but slightly shaken from one narrow escape he had shortly after roaring through the measured mile on the return trip.

A bump there almost tore the steering wheel from his hands and sent the car careening high on the beach until the tires were just skimming the deadly soft sands. With a terrific effort the 50-year-old Englishman wrenched the wheel back, skidded to the safety of the hard sands, and was away to the end of the run and the new record.

"I haven't decided yet whether to stay and try to lift the record higher," Campbell said as he rode back down the beach in the 2,500-horsepower monster, while 50,000 persons, lining the 11½-mile course, cheered the length of the way. "I won't decide that until I have a chance to think things over."

The run today, though only slightly above his old record, was as dangerous as any he has made here—and every time he has taken Bluebird to the beach during this venture something has happened.

First, his cowling broke loose and carbon monoxide fumes nearly

Mexico Holds Primate, Says His Secretary

Arrest Reported, But Diaz Whereabouts Are as Yet Unknown.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, March 7.—The secretary of Archbishop Pascual Diaz, Roman Catholic primate of Mexico, said tonight the archbishop was arrested today while on his way to the Town of Tlanepantla in Mexico Federal District.

The secretary added he was unable to determine the whereabouts of Mgr. Diaz or to learn further details.

He was informed of the arrest, he said, in a telephone call from a servant who had accompanied the archbishop.

Rumors spread about the city that the archbishop had been put aboard an airplane and carried across the border into the United States, but there was no verification.

Both the attorney general's office and the federal district police said they knew nothing of his arrest. The department of interior said it had not ordered the detention.

A truck driver told the archbishop's secretary, Manuel Carreno, that between six and eight agents had taken Mgr. Diaz, his chauffeur and a friend into custody on the road near Cuautitlan, a short way outside the capital.

Carreno said the archbishop had left the city to attend religious services and perform confirmation rites and that he apparently was on his way home when arrested.

Archbishop Diaz, a central figure in the highly controversial Mexican religious situation, was ordered last month by the supreme court to pay a fine of 500 pesos (about $140) or go to jail for 15 days for violating a law by officiating outside of his diocese.

He had been fined in November for conducting services at Ixtapalapa, outside the cathedral, but appealed the sentence.

Military agents said recently he might be called to testify in the investigation of an alleged plot to overthrow the government.

Wage Issue Threatens Works In Senate Test on Bill Today

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration was confronted last night with strong possibility of a second setback on its hapless works and relief bill. Reforming lines of Senate support for the prevailing wage amendment raised the threat of again upsetting the program.

The $4,880,000,000 measure will be called up in the Senate today. Leaders have canceled the Senate's usual Saturday holiday in an effort to speed consideration and hasten another vote on the wage amendment, while their lines still hold.

But prominent labor Senators claimed last night that sufficient inroads have been made on the Administration's antiprevailing wage ranks to write the McCarran amendment into the bill again by a narrow margin.

It was learned that three Democratic Senators who previously voted against the prevailing wage guarantee, have shifted their strength to the labor column.

Earlier it was reported that Senators Austin and Gibson, Vermont Republicans, said to have deserted the McCarran forces on promise of substantial flood control allocations for their marble-studded State, "haven't made up their minds."

Administration leaders apparently are staking much on defeating the wage amendment in its next test. On their first try they were unsuccessful by 1 vote, and the bill was immediately sent back to committee. Ten days of conferences and negotiations intervened. On Tuesday the bill was reported again, minus the amendment, and leaders were confident they could keep it off.

He expressed the wish, however, to get prompt action on the bill, and suggested a unanimous consent agreement may be sought today or tomorrow to limit debate.

Of the two major fights to amend

Richberg Offers Plan To Extend NRA, Limit It to Interstate Trade

SEC Hails Swift's Bond Issue As Money Market 'Ice-Breaker'

$43,000,000 Offer Set to Clear Way for Big Flow of Capital.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Filing by Swift & Co., of Chicago, of a $43,000,000 issue of 3¾ per cent bonds, yesterday brought from officials Securities and Exchange Commission predictions that the long-looked-for "break" in the capital market log jam is now at hand.

The issue—the largest single registration under the securities act of 1933—is the first fruit of simplified regulations promulgated by the commission on January 14. Now that the ice has been broken, a steady flow of other new capital issues and refunding operations is confidently expected.

Besides hailing the Swift issue as pointing the way for other important refinancing operations, officials of the commission noted that the interest rate offered is the lowest for industrial bonds since before the World War. The rate is less than 1 per cent above the average yield on Government bonds.

Proceeds of the new issue, comprising first mortgage sinking fund bonds, will be used to retire an equal amount of outstanding 5 per cent bonds and notes. The issues to be retired are $20,246,000 of first mortgage gold bonds due July 1, 1944, and $23,703,500 of ten-year gold notes due September 1, 1940.

Announcement of the filing of the new issue was made by Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission, who called it "a marvelous step in the right direction." Asked if he thought this was the "break" he has been awaiting, he replied:

"I think a $43,000,000 issue by a company as big as Swift is good evidence that at least it is starting."

He reiterated his belief that

Denies 22,375,000 Report; Admits Total Is an All-Time High.

Half the unemployed persons in the United States are now on relief, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, indicated yesterday. He said that while unemployment is decreasing, relief rolls still are increasing, with the number on either work relief or direct relief the highest since the Government took over the problem.

Hopkins estimated that 20,500,000 persons are now receiving assistance in some form. He denied a statement attributed to him that 22,375,000 persons are being given aid.

Employables Increase.

Two factors, Hopkins said, enter into the increase of the number of persons on relief rolls. One is the rapidly dwindling resources of the unemployed and the other is the number of persons reaching an employable age.

He estimated that the number of employable persons shows a net increase of 500,000 each year. These are persons reaching employable age. Thus if 500,000 more persons are employed each year than the year before, the number of unemployed would remain stationary. He said fewer persons are quitting work because of old age than in normal times.

Included in the total number of persons on relief, Hopkins said, are 4,533,840 families, 700,000 single persons, 40,000 teachers employed with Government funds and engaged in adult education, 100,000 college students receiving part of their expenses from the Government, and

Huey Pictures Gen. Johnson As 'Scapegoat'

By the United Press.

Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), Louisiana, flung at Gen. Hugh S. Johnson last night the charge that the New Deal is "more like a St. Vitus dance" than a Government.

The Louisiana Kingfish, noted for his unusual vocabulary, began his prepared 45-minute radio reply to the scathing attack of Johnson last Monday night by conceding that he could not match his critic "in billingsgate or profanity" and still leave time for presenting his side of the argument.

Charging that President Roosevelt had taken many of his policies from unsuccessful ones of former President Hoover, Long continued:

"While millions have starved and gone naked, while babies have cried and died for milk, while people have begged for meat and bread, Mr. Roosevelt's Administration has sailed merrily along, plowing under and destroying the things to eat and to wear, with tear-dimmed eyes and hungry souls made to chant for this New Deal so that even their starvation dole is now taken away, and meanwhile the food and clothes craved by their bodies and souls go to destruction and ruin.

"What is it? Is it Government? Maybe so. It looks more like St. Vitus dance."

Long was bitter as he attacked the National Recovery Administration which Johnson was instrumental in building as a New Deal agency.

He said that when the NRA started the Administration had "parades

Dynamite Is Found 'Planted' Near Mickey McDonald Home

Fifty pounds of dynamite was found about 200 yards from the home of Mickey McDonald, object of an attack which resulted in the "mistaken identity" killing of Allen Wilson, a newspaper route man last fall, it was learned yesterday.

The explosive was in the box in which it had been shipped from the factory, and appeared to be very weather-beaten. Fuses and detonating caps were found near the box. The dynamite had been frozen and was just thawing out, it was reported.

The discovery was made in back of the McDonald home, in a field of scrub pine, by Sergt. Earl Thomas of the Takoma Park (Md.) police, who was looking for further clews in the murder. Police believe that the explosive was left in the field about the time of the attack on McDonald.

Allen B. Wilson was killed early on an October morning last year as he was delivering a paper, to the McDonald home. Two men who had been hiding behind a tree across the road from the place stepped out and fired with a shotgun and pistols. Wilson was hit in the head while behind the wheel of his car, which ran up a bank and stopped.

Police were summoned by McDonald, who told them Wilson's assailants had mistaken the route man for McDonald, himself. A special squad of Washington detectives were assigned to work on the case with Montgomery County police. Several arrests were made, but all suspects were released later.

Proposal the New Deal's Answer to Court Attacks.

Labor Board Raps Lack of Authority

Johnson Sees Federal Control of Industry as Inevitable.

Major developments yesterday growing out of the New Deal were:

Recovery Coordinator Donald R. Richberg presented to the Senate Finance Committee a 17-point program for extension of the NIRA which called for regulation of interstate commerce only.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former head of the NRA, told the Rhode Island Bar Association at Providence that Government control of all industry—with sanction of the courts—is inevitable in the present trend.

The Administration faced another defeat on the $4,880,000,000 work-relief bill with the switching of senatorial votes to the McCarran amendment which would force payment of prevailing wages on work-relief projects.

By Felix Bruner.

The Administration's plans for the future of NRA were revealed in detail for the first time yesterday by Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coordinator, who told the Senate finance committee he believed the recovery act should be extended for two years, but that NIRA should affect only business engaged in or affecting interstate commerce.

This proposal was looked upon as an effort to answer a barrage of criticism and court attacks on the Government's power to regulate industry.

It precipitated an immediate controversy over the question of what businesses can be considered interstate. Richberg was asked to appear again today before the committee with a list of industries he believes should not come under codes. He indicated this list might be very limited.

Labor Board Complaint.

At the same time, Francis Biddle, chairman of the Labor Relations Board, declared that his board "might as well pack up and go home" unless Congress enacts legislation giving it authority to enforce its rulings.

Biddle, backed by Edwin Smith, the only other member of the board, expressed skepticism over the board's ability to accomplish anything in the future. He said enforcement had virtually broken down, with removal of blue eagles the only punishment that could be meted out to a recalcitrant employer.

Every election ordered during the last three months, Biddle said, had been stopped by court injunction.

Richberg was the first witness before the Senate committee in its NRA investigation. He appeared with a long prepared statement and testified for two hours. The recommendation for dropping intrastate

Roosevelt Plans California Visit

President Roosevelt told a congressional delegation yesterday he hopes to visit California this summer.

The delegation witnessed the signing of a bill providing $350,000 for Federal participation in the California-Pacific-International Exposition, to open May 29 at San Diego.

The President was invited to attend. He replied that he hoped to, and added, jokingly, that it was up to Congress to release him from Washington.

Leaders Seek 2-Billion Limit On HOLC Fund

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Vociferous advocates of big Federal outlays will demand $3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 additional for the HOLC today in the House.

Democratic leaders, anxious to taper off Government aid, will agree to only $1,750,000,000 more for distressed home owners. That figure represents a concession to the so-called "wild men" by the New Deal floor command as the original bill called for but $1,500,000,000.

Observers believed a combination of Democrats and Republicans would outvote the majority party rebels and prevent the authorization from soaring beyond $1,750,000,000 or $2,000,000,000. As finally passed the bill probably will permit the corporation to accept new loan applications for 60 days.

Committee's Plan.

Chairman Steagall of the Banking and Currency Committee warned "we've got to stop some time" in beginning the Administration fight against a possible $5,000,000,000 increase. He refused to be drawn out on all of the committee's plans until consideration of amendments begins today.

Another committee member, Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland, in answer to a question said the committee would offer an amendment to fix the increase at $1,750,000,000.

The committee, it was learned, at a meeting last week tentatively agreed to recommend an additional $2,000,000,000. The compromise figure of $1,750,000,000 was reported to have been reached at a meeting Wednesday night.

Renews Graft Charge.

Representative Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, instigator of the movement for an investigation of irregularities in administration of HOLC funds, renewed his charge of "graft," but conceded the inquiry would not be obtained.

"The Rules Committee won't let my resolution get out on the floor because they're afraid of it," he shouted. "Reports are current around the Capitol I'm making myself disliked. I don't care. This graft and delay in granting loans ought to be investigated.

"Our demand for an investigation has done a lot of good in any event. From now on members of the House will receive more courteous treatment when they deal with the HOLC.

"The old man and old woman without political influence hereafter will get some attention. Heretofore, they had to have the aid of some ward heeler before they could get a loan on their home."

Personnel Defended.

Representative Hancock (Democrat), North Carolina, defended the personnel of the loan agency and praised them on their accomplishments. He declared private capital "must be given a chance to function."

An increase above $1,500,000,000 was opposed by Representative Gifford (Republican), Massachusetts.

"Your President," he told the Democrats, "doesn't want it increased. The banks want this extra billion to get rid of another billion of sour mortgages."

Representative Sisson (Democrat), New York, cautioned against "further unloading of bad mortgages."

Numerous amendments dealing with the total of the authorization, interest rates and acceptance of new applications will be debated today.

Between You and Me

An Orgiastic Entry Into Lent; No Hips, Hips for Byrns; Arizona's New 'Ambassador.'

By Raymond Clapper

YESTERDAY was a dark, raw day in Washington. Drizzles fell occasionally, although the threatened rain did not come. It was hard to believe that Lent had begun.

That was the way it seemed around the news desk, too. Millions of radio listeners take their choice between three jazz orchestras and Huey Long. Senators in the world's greatest deliberative body snarl in open disgust at each other. Harry Hopkins announces that relief rolls are the largest of all time and are growing. Roosevelt puts out the word that prices ought to go still higher, and there is panic in millions of homes that now can afford meat but once a week, if that. Oliver Wendell Holmes is to be buried in Arlington Cemetery and perhaps it's just as well. What he had to say, though never more needed, goes largely unheeded. Sir Malcolm Campbell drives an automobile at a speed of 276.816 miles an hour, the world land record, though he wasn't going anywhere.

Greek rebels with bombs and heavy guns are ready to make a modern battlefield where one of the great civilizations once flourished. Senators talk about the menace of Japan. McAdoo, with one ear cocked for the applause from California, says America will be a boob nation if it doesn't expand its Army, and the Senate promptly rounds out the largest peace-time military program by adding 45,000 more men to the standing Army, while the House prepares to mop up after the last war by getting set to roll the bonus bill through. Britain announces plans to protect citizens against air raids and springs a plan to expand her fleet to 28 warships because of war preparations by other countries, including the United States. France and Italy do likewise because of war preparations by other countries. The American Navy makes secret tests of armored planes on the Pacific Coast. Italian troops prepare to take over Abyssinia, the last country in Africa that even pretended to be independent.

Thus, in an orgy of theoretical self-denial, the so-called Christian world goes plunging hell-bent into Lent.

What also is hard to understand is why Speaker Byrns bars a hula dance from the House Office Building when the dignified Senate lets its own members do the same thing right out on the Senate floor.

Arizona has started something else. The Governor has been authorized by the Legislature to send an "ambassador" to Washington. What they mean is that they are sending an official lobbyist here to wangle more out of the Federal Government for Arizona.

If that will relieve the State's Senators and Representative Greenway from having to run errands so they can devote themselves to larger affairs, it will be a great help. But the chances are that the only result will be a competitive struggle between the congressional delegation and the lobbying "ambassador" to see which can produce the most pork for the old home State. Either that or else the delegation and the official lobbyist will combine forces. That will make it even worse. One sure thing is that it means no good to the taxpayers who support the Federal Government.

And the worst of it is that not all 47 other States are going to let Arizona get away with this without dispatching "ambassadors" of their own to get in on the loot.

Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah, of Louisiana, is a nephew of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, but when it comes to passing judgment on NIRA they are brothers under the skin. Judge Borah has just denied a Government petition to compel a box manufacturer to comply with the labor provisions of the lumber code, expressing the view orally that the whole NIRA is unconstitutional.

Senator Borah was born in Illinois and went West. His brother went South to Louisiana, where Wayne, the judge, was born. Throughout his life the Senator has typified the West. Judge Borah in one generation became the embodiment of Southern tradition. He prepared at Phillips Exeter, studied at Washington and Lee, the University of Virginia and Louisiana State. As was his father, Judge Borah is a Republican. At 32 he became assistant United States district attorney in Louisiana. In 1928, when he was 37, he was appointed a Federal judge by Coolidge.

Johnson the Scapegoat of NRA Failure, Says Long in Radio Reply.

and fascist signs just like Hitler and Mussolini."

"They started the dictatorship here to regiment business and labor much more than anyone did in Germany or Italy," Long continued. "The only difference was in the sign. Italy's sign of the fascist was a black shirt. Germany's sign of the fascist was a swastika. So in America they sidetracked the stars and stripes and the sign of the Blue Eagle was used instead."

The Senator said that codes had been written for "everything from a peanut stand to a power house." And each had "a separate book of rules and laws."

"It would take 40 lawyers to tell a shoe-shine stand how to operate and be certain he didn't go to jail," Long charged.

The Kingfish said he had studied some codes at the request of persons who couldn't understand them, and he couldn't understand them himself.

Calls Johnson Scapegoat.

"The whole thing of Mr. Roosevelt as run under Gen. Johnson became such a national scandal that Roosevelt had to let Johnson slide out as the scapegoat," Long continued. "Let them call for an NRA parade tomorrow and you couldn't get enough people to form a funeral march."

"It was under this NRA, and the other funny alphabetical combinations, which followed it, that we ran the whole country into a mare's nest. The Farleys and Johnsons combed the land with agents, inspectors, supervisors, detectives, secretaries, assistants, etc., all armed with the power to arrest and send to jail whomever they found not living up to some rule in one of these 900 catalogues."

Despite all these governmental organizations, Long insisted that there is still starvation and homelessness and misery. He said Gen. Johnson himself has said there were 80,000,000 people in America badly hurt and wrecked by the depression.

"And now, what is there for the Roosevelt crowd to do but to admit the facts and admit further that they are now on their third year, making matters worse instead of better all the time," he said. "No one is to blame, except them, for what is going on because they have had their way. And if they couldn't change the thing in over two years, now bogged down worse than ever, how could any one expect any good of them hereafter?"

Cites Roosevelt "Promises."

Long then told how Mr. Roosevelt promised in his speech of acceptance at Chicago and during his campaign that "he would pull down the size of the big man's fortune and guarantee something to every family—enough to do away with all poverty and to give employment to those who were able to work and education to the children born into the world."

"I thought for a day or two after he took the oath as President that maybe he was going through with his promises," the Senator added. "No heart was ever so saddened; no person's ambition was ever so blighted, as was mine when I came to the realization that the President of the United States was not going to undertake what he had said he would do, and what I knew to be necessary if the people of America were ever saved from calamity and misery."

Bus Crowded Off Roadway; 7 Persons Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 7.—Seven persons were injured, two of them severely, when an express bus of the Great Eastern Bus Lines, carrying 21 passengers, on the Norfolk to Philadelphia run, skidded and landed with a crash at the bottom of a 12-foot embankment on the Richmond-Washington highway, 32 miles north of Richmond, late today.

The bus landed with terrific impact and rested at a precarious angle after its left front wheel had been imbedded to the hub in several feet of thick mud. The rear part of the machine lay in a small stream of water about a foot deep.

Mrs. Mabel Kingsbury, 38, of Easter, Mass., and L. B. Wilson, of Washington, were the two most seriously injured. The former received several deep lacerations about the face and lost several teeth. Wilson received deep lacerations of the nose and face. Both are in the hospital here. Mrs. John K. Stuart, of Nacogdochez, Tex., suffered a lacerated face and was taken to a Fredericksburg hospital.

Others who received minor injuries were W. T. Bishop, of Richmond, driver of the bus; A. Rodrigues, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; A. C. Frederick, of New York City, and James Blanco, of Brooklyn. They received first aid treatment for minor cuts and bruises.

Bishop was quoted as saying he was crowded off the road by a car bearing a New York license and pulling a trailer. His statement was substantiated by passengers.

Committee Favors Copeland Food Bill

A favorable report on the Copeland food and drug bill, following a wind-up of hearings today before the Senate Commerce Committee, was in prospect last night. The measure, a much-modified redraft of the old Tugwell food and drug bill, will be put to a committee vote after conclusion of hearings, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, said.

Most of the witnesses have indorsed the measure.

Principal opposition has been directed at a section giving the Department of Agriculture, rather than the Federal Trade Commission, jurisdiction in cases of false advertising. Several witnesses favored Trade Commission supervision, contending that agency is better trained in "the business viewpoint."

Term Served By M'Cracken, He Leaves Jail

'Model Prisoner,' 10 Days Behind Him, 'Tended to His Knitting.'

The District Jail lost a model prisoner yesterday.

He was William P. MacCracken, jr., who went there ten days ago to serve a term for contempt of the Senate.

Shortly after 10 a. m. the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, wearing a brown business suit, ducked out a rear entrance of the gloomy, brownstone jailhouse and into a waiting automobile.

To questioners he replied:

"They kept me busy. I tended to my knitting."

Worked on Records.

"Knitting," said Thomas M. Rives, jail superintendent, "involved filing and checking records in the office, a task to which MacCracken diligently applied himself along with some 20 of the 'more intelligent' prisoners."

Other jail officers said MacCracken appeared to take his sentence "in his stride," made no complaints, offered no difficulties and in all ways conducted himself as a model prisoner.

During his stay there, MacCracken lived in the third-floor dormitory occupied by 70 "working" prisoners whom jail regulations permit to wear civilian clothing and who are served better-than-average prison food.

Bids Rives Good-by.

The same car that carried him away pulled up at the front door of the jail an hour before and received his bags. Previously MacCracken had eaten a breakfast of sausage, hot cakes, fried potatoes, cereal and coffee and had bidden Superintendent Rives good-by.

MacCracken's business associates said he was not expected at his office before today. Callers at his apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel were told he was out.

MacCracken was sentenced to jail after papers wanted by a Senate committee investigating airmail contracts had disappeared from his possession. He began serving the jail term only after taking his fight to escape sentence through the Supreme Court.

Oxon Hill High Wins Honors

Will Receive Attendance Banner Fourth Month in Succession.

For the fourth month in succession the Oxon Hill (Md.) High School will receive the banner for the best high-school attendance record in Prince Georges County, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Kathleen Shears, county truant officer, said the average attendance was 97.4 per cent. William T. Jobe is principal of the school.

The Tippett School, near Clinton, Md., will receive the banner for the best attendance at a one-teacher school, with an average of 96.6. Miss Catherine Naylor is principal.

The banner for the two-teacher school will go to the Ritchie School, of which Miss Frances Smith is principal. The average was 95.4 per cent. The University Park School will receive the graded school banner. Miss Madie Craig is principal there.

Final Senior Exam Dropped by Md. U.

Second-semester examinations for seniors at the University of Maryland have been abolished, it was announced yesterday at College Park.

The university senate, headed by Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the institution, at a meeting Wednesday night scrapped the final examinations for seniors and recommended instead a series of tests and quizzes.

The ruling, passed by the board of 20 faculty members and officers, does not, however, affect graduate students.

Packing Bonds Hailed by SEC As 'Ice-Breaker'

$43,000,000 Swift Offer Expected to Clear Way for Capital Flow.

$3,000,000,000 of bonds can be refinanced profitably now that the chief difficulties have been overcome by the new Form A-2, required of seasoned corporations. A combination of uncertain liability, trouble and delay, now largely relieved by revised regulations, has acted to discourage refinancing, he said.

His statement that the way is now cleared for further issues was supported by William B. Traynor, vice president and treasurer of Swift, who asserted that the registration presented no "real difficulties." He said the cost was no more than 10 years ago, the preparation took no more than a month, and the company was glad of the opportunity to take advantage of the plentiful money market.

As an example of how greatly the SEC regulations have been simplified, Chairman Kennedy waved the 60-page registration statement of Swift & Co. and remarked that a similar filing in the past had required 20,000 pages.

Capital Revival Prime Need.

A revival of the capital market, which has been paralyzed for months, is looked upon by Mr. Kennedy and other Administration leaders as one of the prime requisites for recovery. Savings in interest charges thus effected will be reflected back in new business, acting particularly to stimulate the durable goods industries.

Other refunding operations comparable with the Swift issue are being prepared, the SEC chairman said, but he declined to give details before actual registration. He made it clear that he believes many large industrial companies, taking note of the action of Swift & Co., will follow suit.

The Swift bond issue will mature in 1950. Particulars of the refunding operation were announced by the SEC as follows:

"The first mortgage bonds are to be redeemed at par and accrued interest plus a premium of 2½ per cent on the principal. The redemption date on this issue is set for July 1, 1935, and the approximate amount involved in the redemption is $20,752,150.

$46,678,000 Net Proceeds.

"The gold notes are to be redeemed on September 1, 1935, at par and accrued interest plus a premium of 1¼ per cent on the principal. The approximate amount required to complete the redemption of this issue is $23,999,793.75.

"After all expenses and commission to underwriters, the net proceeds to the registrant are estimated at $42,678,000. The commission to underwriters is based on the discount of four-tenths of 1 per cent, or the equivalent of $172,000 * * *

"The $43,000,000 being registered is a part of an authorized issue of $50,000,000, the balance of which is reserved for later corporate use if and when the company may decide to issue it * * * The only other funded debt of the company will be $750,000 of 30-year 5 per cent gold bonds due June 30, 1944. This issue is, however, not outstanding in the hands of the public."

The Swift registration statement contains such additional data as the financial condition of the company, the salaries of officers and directors, and the holdings of stock owners. Total assets were given as $292,668,000. Salaries of the three principal officers were: Charles Swift, chairman of the board, $30,000; G. F. Swift, president, $60,000; W. B. Traynor, treasurer, $50,000.

Returning to Chicago after the filing, Mr. Traynor last night issued a statement pointing out that the proposed refunding "would accomplish a material saving in interest charges during the unexpired term of the outstanding issues and would extend the maturities at the lower rate to the year 1950."

His statement, as carried by the Associated Press, also said it was proposed to offer the new issue, at par, through Solomon Bros. & Hutzler.

Doke Admits Theft Of $17; Faces Jail

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., March 7.—Judson C. Doke, who killed his wife's lover and went free on an "unwritten law" defense, probably will go to prison for stealing $16.93.

Formerly a subordinate city official of suburban San Leandro, Doke suddenly stopped his own trial on charges of misappropriating public funds here today and pleaded guilty to one count accusing him of illegally taking the small sum.

Doke faces a sentence of one to ten years. Prosecuting authorities said probation was prohibited in cases involving a public official convicted of embezzling public funds.

Last summer Doke went to a ranch near Woodland, north of here, and fatally shot Lamar Hollingshead, University of California student poet, with whom attractive Mrs. Doke had admittedly been intimate.

Mascagni Withdraws New Opera From 'Met'

Milan, March 7 (AP).—Ottavio Scotto, who said he was speaking for Pietro Mascagni, today declared the celebrated composer's latest opera "Nerone" would not be produced at the Metropolitan Opera in New York this year, as had been announced, "owing to a change in the Metropolitan directorship and the nomination of Herbert Witherspoon."

Scotto was most critical of Witherspoon's managerial capacity.

$66,000 Transfer By Insull Bared

Former Aids Tell of Funds' 'Switch' to Brother.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 7.—Two of Samuel Insull's former lieutenants took the witness stand at his embezzlement trial today to tell how $66,000 was withdrawn from his utilities companies to support his brother's stock market account.

Fred H. Scheel, former vice president of the Utilities Securities Co., and Oliver E. McCormick, one time treasurer of both Middle West Utilities and Mississippi Valley Utility Investment Cos., detailed steps taken to aid Martin Insull in his market plight, but failed to connect Samuel with the mechanics of the transaction.

Scheel said he had informed Samuel $66,000 was needed to bolster Martin's account and quoted Samuel as declaring "that account must not be sold out" because such action would jeopardize plans to reorganize the Middle West firm. McCormick said he handled the affair from that point and arranged the $66,000 deal.

Dr. F. H. Martin Dies in Arizona At Age of 77

By the Associated Press.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 7.—Dr. Franklin H. Martin, founder and director general of the American College of Surgeons, Chicago, died today of a heart attack. He was 77.

Dr. Martin came here as a winter visitor early in November. Dr. Robert Flinn, who attended him, issued the following statement:

"Dr. Martin suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis, a blocking-off of one of the arteries which nourishes the wall of the heart, on February 27. Although exceedingly ill, he made satisfactory progress until today, when he suffered a second attack of thrombosis, and died at 5 o'clock."

Dr. Flinn said Dr. Martin had been in excellent health until the attack in February, although he had been working hard on national legislative problems.

Mrs. Martin and her husband's secretary were at the hospital when he died.

66 Economists Launch Attack On Banking Bill

See Centralization Plans 'Inviting Disaster' for the Nation.

By the Associated Press.

The Administration's omnibus bill to strengthen Washington's control over the banking system was spattered with objections last night in a statement signed by 66 economists, most of them members of college faculties.

Meanwhile, the Capital sought to gage the practical meaning of a call for redistribution of income—not wealth—voiced in House hearings on the bill Wednesday by Governor Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board.

"The most effective way of achieving a better balance is through income taxes," he said, provoking a torrent of speculation as to how far he was expressing the views of the Administration, and whether an early upward revision of the income tax laws was to be expected.

Warn of Disaster.

The economists attacked virtually every major feature of the banking bill and asserted its enactment would "invite ultimate disaster for this country."

Provisions under which the President would be empowered to appoint the governor of the Reserve Board and remove him at any time were denounced as making the board "politically controlled" and giving it "little opportunity to exercise independent judgment."

"The proposal to repeal the requirements with respect to commercial paper collateral for Federal Reserve notes is unsound," the statement continued. "It will enable the Federal Reserve banks to issue legal tender notes against frozen or illiquid assets under the tolerance or policies of a politically-controlled Federal Reserve Board."

The proposal that "any sound asset" be eligible for rediscount at the Reserve banks was denounced as opening "the way to converting what should be a commercial banking system into an illiquid, noncommercial system."

Eccles' Proposal.

The economists also found fault with provisions for permitting long-term loans on real estate and increasing the percentage of appraised value which may be loaned.

Eccles' statement before the House Banking Committee gave a novel twist to the familiar cry for redistribution of wealth, outstanding item of Huey Long's legislative program. Eccles made it clear he desired to leave capital or wealth unaffected, but wanted a more equitable distribution of the income derived therefrom.

A tax bill is planned for late in the session, for the reenactment of expiring nuisance taxes, and possibly for the imposition of some new levies, in conformity with President Roosevelt's dictum that Congress must provide revenues covering appropriations in excess of budget estimates.

So far as could be learned from congressional leaders, they were uninformed of any Administration desire to reopen the income tax schedules at that time.

20,500,000 Listed On Relief Roster

Included also in the relief figures, Hopkins said, are at least 300,000 families receiving relief because of the drought and not because of industrial unemployment. Included also are 2,250,000 persons engaged in work relief. These persons are employed on 56,000 different projects. They do not include persons engaged on PWA projects.

Sees Aid for 15,000,000.

Hopkins said he estimated that enactment by Congress of the work-relief bill would mean assistance for 15,000,000 persons. He said this was estimated on the basis of work for one person in each 3,500,000 families. He said that because in many instances more than one person in a family is unemployed, this number of families would represent 5,000,000 unemployed persons.

Of the other 5,500,000 persons now on relief rolls, Hopkins said, most of them are drought victims, old people, widows with children, and others not directly connected with industrial work. He said he believed the proposed social security program would take care of most of these people.

Pointing out that the number of relief cases increases as the depression continues, even though employment increases, Hopkins said that even if employment should return to the 1929 level, there would be many more persons on relief than there were then, because of dwindling resources.

All of Hopkins' estimates were based on January figures, but he said he did not believe there had been an increase of relief cases in February and that, although March usually is the peak month, he did not believe there would be a sharp increase this month.

In January the number on relief increased 3.2 per cent over December and expenditures increased 9.3 per cent. Total expenditures were $196,179,193. A part of this increase, Hopkins said, was due to increased living costs.

In the District of Columbia there were 14,989 on relief in January, as compared with 14,562 in December. Relief costs increased from $849,591 to $967,162.

NRA to Control Only Interstate Trade Is Asked

Proposal New Deal's Reply to Court Attacks on Its Authority.

He explained that the codes which his proposal would eliminate would include a large number of local and service industries. He added that he believed Congress should consider whether it was worth while to maintain a large number of minor codes affecting small businesses with few employes.

Among other proposals included in the 17-point program were:

Explicit authorization by Congress of administration activities to meet the present emergency.

Extension of the act for two years to allow further study of the problem looking toward permanent legislation.

Continuation of present form of code administration with express restrictions upon the exercise of public authority by a private body.

Clear standards set up by Congress including definitions of monopolies and monopolistic practices. Definite legislation for control of natural resources industries.

Power For President.

Explicit power for the President to impose conditions and modifications of codes.

Power for the President to impose limited codes covering hours and wages, "notoriously unfair" business practices and waste of natural resources.

Standards of minimum wages and maximum hours within which the President could base his orders in imposing codes.

Provision for financing code administration so far as possible by the trade or industry concerned.

Preservation of provision for voluntary agreements to improve labor or industrial conditions.

Continuation of the use of insignia or labels by concerns under codes.

Definition of antitrust provisions.

Continuation of Section 7(a), defining rights of workers.

Strengthening of enforcement machinery by preventing violations by equity procedure, providing for punishment only by fine for code violation, providing for the compromise of liabilities incurred, and making remedies under the Federal Trade Commission act available for code enforcement.

Varying Responses.

Announcement of this program immediately brought varying responses. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared it would meet with labor's opposition. He said abandonment of codes for intrastate business would mean a return to "indefensible long hours, minimum wages below a subsistence level and a withdrawal of the small economic protection now accorded to workers employed in these industries."

Green said it was inconceivable that Congress should abandon the NIRA, as has been proposed in some quarters. He gave the federation's program as follows:

"Minimum rates of pay, maximum hours, section 7(a) providing for collective bargaining; prohibition of child labor; equal representation of labor upon administrative boards and upon code authorities; the elimination of unfair trade practices."

He said all these things should be incorporated in a new law.

Senate critics of the NRA were almost unanimous in their opinion that the Richberg program did not go far enough in curtailing the activities of the Recovery Administration. Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, told Richberg that it was difficult, under his definition, to find any business not engaged in interstate commerce.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, said that the program would perpetuate NRA "with many of its obnoxious features."

"It is quite apparent," said Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, "that very few codes will be eliminated. From what Mr. Richberg said, I should judge that perhaps only the hairdressers and barbers will be dropped. His recommendations are made to justify what has become a great national racket. The Federal Trade Commission should be given complete control over drafting and enforcing codes."

Johnson Declares U. S. Control Of All Industry Is Inevitable

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., March 7.—An ever-widening field of Federal supervision over the Nation's commerce—sanctioned by the courts—was predicted tonight by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

Declaring the Nation was "sweeping like an avalanche" toward a condition of economic complexity in which the small business man is being replaced by the great corporation, Gen. Johnson said:

"I think the Supreme Court has seen this clearly and that if anybody thinks that these great autocrats of the national breakfast table ought to be freed from any aspect of Governmental attention merely because the old-time butcher, baker, or candlestick-maker was not dangerous enough to the public helplessness to need watching—well, he is just living in a medieval dream and probably thinks that Pretty Boy Floyd, Bonnie Parker, and John Dillinger are Friar Tuck, Maid Marian and Robin Hood.

"Altruistic banditry is a thing of the romantic past and we can be well assured that corporations have no souls. I am no trust-buster, but I veritably believe that our public will not consent to take its soup out of any one dipper without having a direct say in the matter, and that there is no possible workout of this vast and inevitable coalescence of business in which the public shall not have a part."

Gen. Johnson, addressing the Rhode Island Bar Association banquet, said the clergy had a right to discuss social problems but no right to form a political organization and use religion and emotion instead of exposition for argument.

His statement came in answer to a question from the floor as to his opinion of the clergy discussing social problems. He previously had refused to answer a direct question as to his opinion of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

As Johnson ended his address and awaited questions some one shouted, "How about Huey Long?"

The general arose and called back, "You didn't state your name and I'm not sure you're not Father Coughlin." Johnson had requested that a questioner give his name first.

The former NRA head spoke a few hours before Senator Huey P. Long went on the air in Washington to answer his recent criticisms.

Johnson's speech, also broadcast, contained only a brief reference to the Louisianan. While promising not to drag in "any dead cats, ants in pants or other tribal totems of recent turmoil," he said he could not forego the observation that "Huey seems to have appropriated my ants to scatter about in Senate seats."

After paying tribute to the late Oliver Wendell Holmes, Gen. Johnson swung into a discussion of legal battles involving the NRA and said there were two questions at issue: "First, whether there shall be any regulation at all and second, in whatever field there is to be regulated, whether the Congress or the States shall do it."

Dealing with the first, he said:

"It seems quite clear to me * * * that there is going to be a field of regulation, ever widening in the painstaking process of judicial inclusion and exclusion, and that no such artificial and more or less dogmatic distinction as that of the 'common callings' is going to mark its limitation."

Going on to the second question, he said his experience as chief of the NRA taught him that "in our modern economic life, there is no more crazy concept than that State lines are controlling boundaries of American industrial activity."

One Single Country.

"We must not bury our noses so deeply in books of law and precedent that we can not see and hear the great thunderous sweep of time and economics, which already has proved to nearly all men who have eyes to see and ears to hear that, in commerce, we are one single country and not 48 water-tight political compartments," he said.

"With great constructive statesmanship, our Supreme Court has made it clear that while the Federal Government has left (and should leave) to the States local governance of commerce whenever possible, yet, that, whenever Washington so much as speaks in this area of its own proper control, the power of the States over commerce vanishes.

"It is my belief that, within its proper field, there is, and there should be, practically no limit to this Federal power over commerce of all kinds."

Taking up Senator Borah's recent assertion that Johnson had recorded himself as against the little man, the general declared President Roosevelt had "saved more little men under NRA than Senators Borah or Nye ever preached about."

Wage Issue Again Threatens Works

the bill, the prevailing wage amendment will be voted on first, while amendments to cut the total of the appropriation will come late in the measure's consideration.

Led by Senators Alva B. Adams, of Colorado, and Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia (Democrats), those who hope to reduce the appropriation to $2,880,000,000 or less are looking forward to an accounting from the Treasury on expenditures from the original $3,200,000,000 recovery fund.

The Senate ordered that accounting in a resolution adopted early this week. Senator Byrd, author of the resolution, talked with Secretary Morgenthau yesterday, and was assured a report would be ready for the Senate by Monday. Byrd believes the report will show $1,600,000,000 still is unspent from the original appropriation and the new authorization should be curtailed accordingly.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, reintroduced his wage amendment Wednesday, but has made no further mention of an additional amendment offered to Robinson while recent negotiations were in progress. This specifically would have given the President power to pay whatever monthly wage he wished on Federal projects, provided the prevailing hourly wage was observed.

Johnson Awaits Reply Of Long and Coughlin

By the United Press.

Providence, R. I., March 7.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who bitterly assailed Senator Huey Long and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin in a speech at New York Monday night, will study both of their answering speeches and then will make one reply to both of them.

The former NRA administrator arrived here late today to address the Rhode Island Bar Association and told newspapermen he had no intention of prolonging his controversy with the two men whom he referred to as "pied pipers," but that "from time to time, if necessary, I may have something to say."

Johnson said he was "pretty much in agreement" with the NRA extension program proposed before the Senate Finance Committee today by his successor, Donald R. Richberg. "It is along the lines of my own recommendations nearly a year ago," Johnson remarked.

Thousands Due At Rites Today For Ex-Justice

Both Church and Military Services Are Arranged for Holmes.

Oliver Wendell Holmes will be buried today—the ninety-fourth anniversary of his birth—with many thousands expected to attend in spite of efforts to keep the services both at All Souls' Unitarian Church and in Arlington National Cemetery as simple as possible.

Final arrangements for the ceremonies, which will begin at noon in the church at Sixteenth and Harvard streets, were made yesterday by Edward Holmes, nephew of the former justice; the Army, the Metropolitan Police Department and the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce.

The hearse will leave the Holmes house at 1720 I street northwest about 11:30 a. m., proceeding to Sixteenth street and north to All Souls'. Buses on Sixteenth street will be diverted from the church until the cortege leaves for Arlington.

Dr. Pierce, who officiated in the same edifice at the last rites for William Howard Taft five years ago, will read Joseph Blanco White's poem, "Mysterious Night," and a few of Mr. Holmes' quotations, and deliver the Unitarian service for the dead. From the organ's sonorous throat will issue Handel's "Largo" and the large movement from Anton Dvorak's "New World Symphony."

First Lady to Be at Church.

Approximately 800 persons can be seated in the church. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the nine justices of the Supreme Court will lead the mourners there. The President will go directly from the White House to the cemetery.

The Harvard Club of Washington, which claimed the son of the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table as its oldest and longest-term member, will be represented by a committee consisting of Charles Warren, Ralph H. Hallett, Frederic A. Delano, Edward A. Harriman and Walter R. Tuckerman.

Among the former justice's friends from his home State of Massachusetts in attendance will be James M. Curley, Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg and Arthur D. Hull and John G. Palfrey, representing the Boston Bar Association. Representative A. Piatt Andrew will represent the mayor and town council of Beverly, Justice Holmes' summer home.

Fifty policemen will be on duty when the services, which are expected to last 45 minutes, are concluded and the mourners leave for Arlington.

Army to Take Charge.

The procession will go south on Sixteenth street to Rhode Island avenue, thence to M street to Key Bridge to the Fort Myer gate of Arlington Cemetery. There, at 1 o'clock, the cortege will be met by six Fort Myer soldiers who will be the body bearers, a firing squad of eight men from Washington Headquarters Company and the United States Army Band under the leadership of Capt. Thomas F. Darcey.

Taking charge of the funeral, Army officers will supervise the casket's transfer from hearse to caisson as the band plays an arrangement of patriotic airs entitled the American Medley Grand March. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and his eight associates will take their places, as honorary pallbearers, about the caisson.

Following this brief ceremony, the procession will continue to the grave, which is situated on a knoll about half a mile northeast of the Lee Mansion. To the Army it is No. 7004-A in Section 5. Nearby rests the remains of William Howard Taft, Todd Lincoln and former Secretary of War John W. Weeks. The body of Justice Holmes will lie beside that of his wife, who died six years ago.

Salute and Taps to End Rites.

The thrilling notes of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" will accompany the transfer of casket from caisson to grave. Dr. Pierce will offer a short prayer and benediction as it is lowered. A three-volley salute will be fired and taps will end the service.

Brig. Gen. P. L. Miles, commander of the Sixteenth Brigade, made arrangements for the rites in Arlington. Capt. H. B. Smith, brigade adjutant, said the graveside area will be roped in and none but those select d will be permitted to enter the enclosure. Photographs may not be taken, he announced, while the service is in progress.

The Military Order of the Loyal Legion, of which Mr. Holmes was honorary commander from 1930 until his death, will be represented at the funeral by Col. J. Miller Kenyon, Col. Frank S. Hight, Charles Mason Remey and Col. Goodwin Ordway.

Hagerstown Woman Recalls Holmes' Visit During Civil War

Then a Captain, He Stayed at Her Home to Recover From Bullet Wound.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 7.—Mrs. James Findlay, one of Hagerstown's best known women, today recalled the three-day sojourn at her home, Mount Prospect, in 1863 of Capt. Oliver Wendell Holmes, later to become Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, who died yesterday in Washington.

Despite a serious wound in the neck, where a bullet during the Battle of Antietam, near here, had narrowly missed striking the vertebra, Capt. Holmes, then a handsome youth of 22, became quite smitten with a beautiful cousin of Mrs. Findlay and prolonged his stay at Mount Prospect longer than he had expected.

Finally, Mrs. Findlay's mother, the late Mrs. Howard Kennedy, feeling that the captain's father would be worried upon receiving word that his son had been wounded, sent a telegram notifying Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes where his son was. Capt. Holmes left here on the Cumberland Valley Railroad for Harrisburg, Pa., where he met his father, who had been searching for him after receiving word from the War Department that his son had been wounded.

Mrs. Findlay, who was then only a small girl, said she recalls the morning when her mother, brother and herself were standing on the lawn of their home, when two young soldiers came slowly up the street. She observed that one, Capt. Holmes, was very pale. Her mother sent her brother across the street and invited the two soldiers to come over. It was then she learned that Capt. Holmes' had been wounded and invited him to stay at her home while she dressed his wound.

The friendship, which had its inception in the brief stay there, was continued throughout the years by Mrs. Findlay and her mother. Five years ago Mrs. Findlay visited the aged Justice at his home in Washington, and for an hour they reminisced.

Song Festival Plans Dropped

Lack of Funds Prevents Holding of Virginia's Choral Event.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, March 7.—The Virginia State choral festival, a musical event which has been participated in by hundreds of Old Dominion musicians each spring for the past three years, will not be held this spring, it was stated today.

Verbon Kemp, of Charlottesville, secretary of the festival, and John Powell, co-sponsor with Mrs. John Buchanan of the festival, both confirmed reports that financial difficulties will block a renewal of the event in 1935.

Guarantors have taken a large percentage of loss on the previous festivals held in Richmond and Charlottesville and thus far no group has been found willing to underwrite the expense of a song fest this spring.

"A mere pittance of $4,000 would be required," Mr. Powell said.

Despite this, choral groups are continuing to hold together and sing in Roanoke, Danville, Richmond, Lexingotn and other points, the Virginia composer said. It is believed that two or more of these groups, particularly in the western part of the State, may unite in one choral concert, although no definite plans have been made.

Famed Beauty, Mrs. Tabor, 73, Found Frozen

"Two attempts have been made to burn me out of here," Mrs. Tabor once said: "Let them know I am prepared. From sunset to sunrise I sit in an obscure hiding place in my home waiting for them to repeat this offense."

The shotgun, during these vigils, always was close at hand. Finally a company that took over the property gave her permission to remain until her death. Previously she had remained at the mine through right of homestead.

For 41 years since the death of the husband she idolized, "Baby Doe" clung tenaciously to the belief that in some way, perhaps through a "miracle" the Matchless would rebuild the huge fortune which Tabor lost in the panic of 1893.

In the cabin, clinging to the side of old Fryer Hill, a mile and one-half from Leadville, Coroner Corbett found a small cache of food, but only a few sticks of firewood.

Was Famed as Beauty.

He said she had apparently taken a cold upon her last visit to Leadville, February 20, and that she had attempted to treat herself without summoning aid. He said her condition probably turned worse and she was unable to leave her bed to replenish the fire. Death by freezing resulted.

The coroner was able to locate only one relative, a brother, Willard McCourt, retired Denver salesman. He left immediately for Leadville to claim the body.

The beautiful "Baby Doe" was brought to Colorado's rough mining camps by her youthful first husband, Harvey Doe, son of a wealthy Wisconsin lumberman.

Became Senator's Wife.

It was not long until she divorced Doe. Tabor, who came West from Holland, Vt., was near the crest of his meteoric rise to wealth and fame.

He had started as a grocery store owner at Leadville, grubstaked two shoemakers in a mine. "The Little Pittsburgh," that produced him his first million, then he was taken for a "sucker" by a wandering prospector who "salted" a mine, apparently worthless, with gold dust and sold it to Tabor. It was the Matchless.

His wealth was estimated at $11,000,000 when Baby Doe arrived and fell in love with Tabor, many years her senior. He recently had divorced his first wife, the hard-working Augusta Pierce Tabor. He was named United States Senator.

So he and Baby Doe went to Washington where they were married, with President Arthur and his Cabinet as the wedding guests.

He showered gifts upon his 27-year-old bride, who was one of 14 children of Peter McCourt, Oshkosh, Wis., tailor.

Tabor built a mansion in Denver and then, as a magnificent contribution to the culture of the West, constructed the gold, silver and mahogany trimmed Tabor Opera House over whose boards many of the Nation's great artists trod.

The Tabors were the leaders of the West's society but soon misfortune came. He died a year after he had been appointed postmaster at Denver, his entire fortune gone.

Those who intimated that the pretty girl had married Tabor for his fortune were surprised when she rose to the emergencies of poverty and nursed him in his illness and misfortune.

After Tabor died Baby Doe was virtually alone in the world with her two daughters, Elizabeth, now Mrs. Elizabeth Tabor Little, of Milwaukee, and Rose May Silver Dollar Tabor, who died a decade ago in a Chicago fire.

The aging Baby Doe lived for a time in Denver after her husband's death and then went to the shack at the Matchless.

Blast of Nitro Kills 10 Waiting Gusher in Utah

4 Bodies Missing at Town Where Brigham Young Predicted Riches.

By the Associated Press.

St. George, Utah, March 7.—Death and disaster ruled tonight in the little town where Brigham Young, who led the Mormons into Utah, is said to have predicted great riches.

In the fire-blackened ruins of a drilling development near here, searchers poked for four bodies still missing after ten persons were killed in a premature explosion of nitro-glycerin. A happy throng of men, women and children had gathered to see "blow in" an oil well—and the wealth Young prophesied.

It was feared the missing would never be found. Five other persons killed instantly by the blast and the accompanying flames last night were identified by bits of clothing. One died in a hospital.

A coroner's jury declared the explosion an accident.

It came with frightful suddenness. Some two score persons invited to the scene by Charles D. Alsop, general manager of the local company drilling the well, waited expectantly for southwestern Utah's first gusher to come roaring in.

But as the charge of explosives was being lowered into the hole—to blast and loosen the oil-bearing sand and permit the black gold to pour forth—there was a deafening detonation. The derrick was splintered and tattered over in flames.

Alsop was among the missing. Lost with him were Gail A. Nicholson, Joseph Empey, jr., and William M. Maloney, all of St. George.

The bodies of Mrs. Alsop, Mrs. Joseph S. Snow, C. M. Fleckinger, Joseph F. Kitterman and Ray B. Nelson were recovered mangled and torn. Miss Lea Cottam died today.

Long-continued efforts to find oil here are declared to have a basis in a prediction of Brigham Young, second president of the Latter Day Saints Church and leader of the Mormon immigration, that St. George would become Utah's most important city. The population is about 2,500.

Shank Calls Priest As He Faces Chair Today as Poisoner

By the Associated Press.

Tucker, Ark., March 7.—Mark H. Shank today showed no concern that he must die at dawn tomorrow in the electric chair.

Thin and sharp featured, the 43-year-old former Akron, Ohio, attorney, host at a poison picnic two years ago which brought death to four, later the center of controversy over his mental condition, made only one concession to his last day of life. He quit his cot in his condemned cell and donned his clothes for the first time in six months.

Yesterday, he shook off a year-long stupor, called for a priest, later asked for a table and sat writing for several hours.

"You have some message to give out, an announcement?" asked Prison Superintendent S. L. Todhunter on his daily visit.

"No, not now," said Shank. "I'll do my talking to the priest."

Only one member of a family of five survived the poisoned grape-juice which Shank served at a picnic in Saline County in August, 1933.

The victims were Alvin Colley, a professional associate from Akron; Mrs. Colley, and two of their children, Clement, 11, and Clarence, 7.

A third child, Clyde Colley, 4, lived to tell about the affair and to point out Shank as "the man who put something in the grapejuice."

Ambulance Crash Holds Ballstonite

Driver of Other Car Denies He Was Reckless.

Pleading not guilty to reckless driving, Leslie E. Egleston, 34, of Ballston, Va., driver of an automobile that collided with a Board of Welfare ambulance at Twenty-sixth street and Constitution avenue Wednesday, was held in $1,000 bail yesterday, pending the decision of veniremen who will hear his case.

Meanwhile, physicians at Emergency Hospital reported the condition of Harry Wallthrop, 45, of the 300 block, Second street northeast, driver of the ambulance, as unchanged. They siad Wallthrop, who was pinned beneath the overturned ambulance, which burst into flames, still has a slender chance to recover.

James Rochester, 11, Addison School pupil, who was being taken to the hospital to be treated for pneumonia at the time of the crash, was in a serious condition, Emergency Hospital physicians asserted.

Two Rob Youth of $18.

Two young white men held up Harry Brand, 21, of 508 First street southeast, in a gas station at Second and H streets northeast, he told police last night. They got $18.

"Death" Experience Changed His Ideas on Life

Harris & Ewing Photos.

The "death" for seven minutes of Vincent Montessi, of Washington, is a big medical story—and a bigger event to Montessi. Apparently entirely recovered, he says his temporary "death" has changed his ideas on life. On the right he is being congratulated by Patrolman P. G. Tanner.

Mellon Inquiry Involves Bank In Tax Charge

Hogan Protests Offering of Evidence Against Union Trust.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 7.—The Government's attempt to introduce evidence supporting its claim the $300,000,000 Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh "regularly was engaged in the practice of tax evasion" brought a temporary halt late today in the hearing of Andrew W. Mellon's $3,089,000 income tax case.

Carl R. Korb, dapper young vice president of the bank, was asked by Robert H. Jackson, Government counsel, if he hadn't prepared in November, 1930, a list of stocks held by Union Trust at a cost price above the market price at that time.

The inference was that Korb had selected some stocks which Jackson said he would prove were sold fictitiously for income tax reductions by the bank.

Frank J. Hogan, veteran Washington attorney and chief counsel for Mellon, objected on grounds that "what the Union Trust Co. did a year before the taxpayer (Mellon) is accused of underpaying his tax has nothing to do with this case."

"I am attacking the credibility of this witness, and his bias," replied Jackson. "Also the credibility of the records of the Union Trust Co. introduced in this case, the credibility of the affidavit of Henry C. McEldowney, its president, received in this case, and to show the knowledge of and the participation in a plan of tax evasion claimed by the Government."

Jackson read into the record a long list of alleged transactions in which he said he would prove Union Trust had engaged. It involved sales of numerous securities by Union Trust to its subsidiary, the Union Savings Bank, and nine alleged sales of stock by directors and a patron of the institution, in which tax losses were established and the stocks repurchased by the owner after the statutory 30-day limit.

Capital's Face Washed By Showers Sans Soap

Misty weather, accompanied by occasional drizzles, yesterday washed clean the Capital's face of the deposit of dirt left by Wednesday's dust storm, which filtered into the District from the West.

Meanwhile, beneath gray, dismal skies, the mercury sank to a minimum of 43 degrees at 6 p. m. Yesterday's maximum was 47 at 3 p. m., and at twilight homebound traffic crawled through gray mists.

Today will be fair and colder, with the temperature sinking to the 30's, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Alienation Is Charged In Action for $50,000

Charging alienation of her husband's affections, Mrs. Hazel C. Koontz, 227 Massachusetts avenue northeast, yesterday filed suit in Upper Marlboro, Md., to recover $50,000 damages from Ednah R. Kerwin Koontz, of Largo, Md.

Filed By Attorney Robert W. McCullough, the suit pointed out that Mrs. Koontz was married to Lake W. Koontz in 1920, "and lived peacefully and happily until the wrongful acts of the defendant."

D.C. Health Job To Be Vacated By Dr. Schwartz

Assistant Officer, Renamed as Dr. Ruhland Aid, Will Leave April 1.

Dr. Edward J. Schwartz, assistant District health officer the last eight years, yesterday submitted his resignation from the office, effective April 1. It was accepted.

In his letter to the Commissioners he gave no reason for his act. He had been reappointed assistant to Dr. George C. Ruhland, the new health officer, a few weeks ago.

Dr. Schwartz has told friends he is anxious to go to California, where he has many friends and relatives and has wanted to take a prolonged vacation.

When Dr. William C. Fowler was retired as health officer Dr. Schwartz, submitted his resignation, but it was withdrawn upon his recent reappointment.

He came to the District from Alliance, Ohio, where he served on the State board of health. He also was a member of the State board of health of Florida.

Fiermonte and Bride Off On Second Honeymoon

Their hurried departure followed a police decree granting the return of Enzo's passport, which had been taken from him when he landed at Genoa almost a month ago.

Rent Evictions By Nonowners Hit in Ruling

Real Estate Agent in Such Cases Is Practicing Law, Justice Says Here.

Although holding that real estate operators have the right "to fill out deeds, leases, notes and other papers of their nature," Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday, in the District Supreme Court, ruled that they could not engage in collecting rents "by eviction proceedings in court," when they are not the owners of the leased property.

To allow such eviction proceedings would, in Justice Bailey's opinion, permit real estate men to practice law.

His opinion was given in a suit brought by Richard A. Harman, an attorney, through Richard L. Merrick, another attorney, to stop the J. McKinney Berry Co. from indulging in the "unauthorized practice of the law."

"The defendant holds himself out to the public as conducting a rental business and collecting rents for any one who may employ him," Justice Bailey said. "While it is true that an agent, under certain circumstances, may bring suit in his own name, the practice, as in the instant case, of doing this for anyone who may employ him, engaging in the business of collecting rents by eviction proceedings in court when he is not the owner of the leased property is, in my opinion, the act of practicing law."

Flood Feared as Rains Continue in the South

Jackson, Miss., March 7 (AP). Flood warnings were posted in sections of four Southern States today as residents of the harassed areas anxiously awaited a predicted cold wave they hoped would bring an end to torrential rains of the past 60 hours.

Swelled to flood or near flood levels were the Pearl, Tallahatchie, Strong, Leaf and Okatohoma Rivers in Mississippi; Little River in Southwest Arkansas; Black Warrior and Tombigbee Rivers in south Alabama and a number of bayou streams in northeast Louisiana.

REVOLUTION AND RELIGION IN MEXICO

TWO VIEWPOINTS

● THE PRESENT shocking crisis between church and state in Mexico is one of the most serious in history. While the masses fight grimly for the right to their beliefs, their Government struggles with equal determination to educate the populace to what it contends are progressive principles conceived for their own good. What lies ahead . . . bloody civil war or a happier civilization . . . none can say.

● BEGINNING next Friday, The Post will offer a series of important articles presenting both sides to the question: a Catholic viewpoint, written by Frederick Vincent Williams from material collected during a six weeks' journey through Mexico and opposing viewpoint prepared from official records and other sources.

● THIS CLOSE-UP of the tense political and religious conditions in Mexico will be presented in an impartial spirit by The Post. Publication of the articles does not imply editorial indorsement of any views introduced therein.

● The first of the series, originally scheduled for today, will appear a week from today, instead . . . Friday, March 15.

Britain Informed of View by Phillips; 'Warning' Given to Japan.

Undersecretary of State William Phillips yesterday revealed he had informed Great Britain that this Government believed if any financial assistance is given China to relieve that nation's economic distress it should be done by "cooperative action."

Mr. Phillips expressed this attitude several days ago to Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador. The latter called on Mr. Phillips to express the view of his government that China's financial situation required an exchange of thoughts between the major powers and possibly concerted action.

It is understood that the British were approached regarding China's serious financial condition by both Chinese and Japanese agencies and that the British foreign office believed it wise to ascertain the views of other powers vitally interested in the Far East. The Anglo-American conversations were in no wise an effort to offset Japanese overtures to the Chinese, it was contended.

Japan's Aid Alone Opposed.

Mr. Phillips' statement yesterday would indicate that in extending assistance to China the Japanese should have a hand. But by the same token it was taken as a clear warning that this Government is one with the British in frowning on any scheme whereby Japan alone would come to China's aid.

Mr. Phillips' statement of his conversations with Sir Ronald was as follows:

"I informed the British Ambassador that this Government welcomed the initiative of the British government and shared the view that consideration might well be given to the possibility that, if China needs and desires financial assistance from abroad, the powers interested and concerned should canvass sympathetically the possibility of rendering such assistance and rendering it by cooperative action.

"I also noted that for many years past the principle of cooperative action in such matters has been in favor among the powers."

Loan Mentioned Unofficially.

No light was thrown on the type of financial assistance which might be given to China, although the possibility of an international loan has been mentioned unofficially from time to time. Whether Congress would agree to the Treasury contributing to such a loan is a matter of great doubt, especially in view of the rapidly mounting deficit here.

On the other hand, it is rather widely recognized that this country has, at least in part, been responsible for China's present difficulties due to the silver-purchase program. The powers joining in concert to aid China might be satisfied if this country's contribution were modification of the silver-purchase program.

Instead of modifying the silver-purchase program the temper on Capitol Hill is toward expanding it in an effort to boost higher the price of the white metal. Instead of relieving the Secretary of the Treasury of the obligation to buy the metal, the Senate silver bloc wants to require him to purchase a specified large amount monthly.

Thus, it appears that whatever course is decided on in the way of giving international help to China, the Administration will encounter difficulties. When the British complete their canvass of viewpoints, perhaps a way can be found for this country to participate.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, March 7.—The Chinese government "would welcome an international loan as proposed by friendly powers," H. H. Kung, minister of finance of the nationalist government, said on a visit here today.

No concrete loan offers have yet been made to China, he said, but Kung conceded that "preliminary talks" concerning international credit have been going on for some time.

"As the biggest market for international trade in the Orient," he explained, "the situation in China has naturally engaged the serious attention of friendly powers who, from the standpoint of our economic interests, hope that definite measures may be devised with a view to hastening a return of conditions in this country to normal stability. Hence the proposal for an international loan to China."

slightly in the face of desperate resistance.

Gen. Demetrius Kamanos, the rebel commander, was said to be sorely pressed on two sides and seriously handicapped by his lack of modern artillery.

The rebels, in sorry plight for supplies, went pillaging through numerous villages, border towns heard, causing considerable damage to tobacco fields which are the lifeblood of the countryside.

How solidly Macedonia was supporting the revolt was the subject of conflicting advices.

Some sources said Kamanos was resorting to drastic measures to press Macedonians into service. Other reports said Macedonian men and youths, always eager for autonomy, were rushing voluntarily to his colors in larger numbers.

The insurgents control areas as large as Rhode Island, Vermont and Delaware.

(A dispatch from Athens to Paris said loyal forces under Gen. Kaliastras had smashingly defeated the Macedonian rebels. Bulgarian sources were quoted as saying 600 rebels were killed, 2,000 wounded and 700 taken prisoner.)

Americans in War Zone.

Between 25 and 30 Americans reside in the war-swept area, most of them connected with the Glenn Tobacco Co. at Seres, where heavy fighting has been reported; the Gerry Tobacco Co. at Kavalla, which government planes attacked yesterday, and the Monks Ulan Co., which recently completed large drainage projects in eastern Macedonia.

From Kavalla today come reports of the most tragic incident yet to occur in the bitterly fought civil war.

Government troops, it was reported, fired upon the maternity hospital there maintained by Mme. Venizelos, wife of the rebel leader, on the assumption that it was a nest of revolutionaries.

[Dispatches from Alexandria, Egypt, said former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, titular head of the revolt, intends to declare Crete an independent state under the protection of the League of Nations if the revolt is finally crushed.]

All through the Balkans, old tinder box of Europe, Greece's neighbors strengthened their border guards and waited watchfully, while French and English war vessels steamed into Piraeus to protect their nationals.

Strafing Continues.

Gen. Kondylis' aircraft swept across Macedonia once again to pour their hail of machine gun fire and small bombs into the rebel encampments.

Battered by the aerial bombardment and heavy artillery though they were, the insurgents stuck stubbornly to their guns, waiting knee-deep in the mud and mire.

As fear of an attack from the sea swept Athens, its business life shocked into paralysis by the spreading revolt, the rebels' war fleet, numbering five vessels, seemingly was carrying all before it.

Mytilene, Samos and Chios, each with population of over 70,000, surrendered in quick succession. Already in the hands of the insurrectionists was the big island of Crete.

Reports from the three islands which fell said the insurgents came ashore, raided warehouses and banks, carried away plundered supplies and took money to swell the coffers of the revolt.

King George in India.

The report that King George, ousted in 1922, might be summoned from his hunting expedition in India in an effort to save Greece from complete chaos was strengthened as John Metaxas, former minister without portfolio and staunch royalist, became acting minister of war succeeding Gen. Kondylis who is in the field.

While considerable mystery surrounded the whereabouts of the rebel fleet, consisting of the crack cruiser Averoff and four destroyers, it was reported active in the Aegean seizing Greek merchant ships and pillaging supplies.

[The correspondent of the Paris newspaper Intransigeant reported from Athens that the warships were approaching Tsayesi in the Gulf of Salonika 435 miles from Athens.]

As the British cruiser Royal Sovereign and the French destroyer Verdun moved into Piraeus harbor to be welcomed by salvos from the Piraeus battery, the British and Italian ministers at Athens called on Premier P. Tsaldaris.

It was reported unofficially that the British envoy expressed the hope that the government would be successful in quelling the revolt quickly.

The Italian representative, it was understood, assured Tsaldaris that Italy would not allow Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, veteran Greek revolutionary and dictator for 24 hours in 1933, to leave Italy for Greece.

Alcohol Tax Unit Pay Again Stalled

Committee Fails to Meet for Action as Slated.

When 1,130 employes of the alcohol tax unit of Internal Revenue Bureau are to get the pay they have been working without since December 1 remained undecided yesterday following an abortive meeting of the Treasury-Postoffice Appropriation sub-committee of the Senate yesterday.

The committee was to have given a final hearing on the amendment, recommended by the President, to put the employes on the pay roll with back pay. The meeting wasn't held because there wasn't a quorum of the sub-committee, of which Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, is chairman.

Pay of the employes was stopped because of the McKellar amendment adopted by the last Congress. No date was set by Senator Glass for another meeting of this sub-committee.

Turks Mobilize; Bulgars Protest action if the massing of troops is not discontinued.

During the last year, he said, Turkish forces in eastern Thrace have been greatly increased in number. After Bulgaria remonstrated, his memorandum continued, the Turkish government replied that the measures were taken solely for the defense of the Dardanelles.

Population "Excited."

The memorandum, asserting 24,000 men have been sent from Istanbul and Asia Minor to Eastern Thrace, said "at Adrianople authorities have begun recruiting bands of irregulars who, under the command of disguised officers, are really designed to operate in Bulgaria in the event of hostilities breaking out."

Charging that intense propaganda against Bulgaria is exciting the civil population, the memorandum said the Turkish Army "would be ready within 24 hours to occupy all of Southern Bulgaria."

"The Turkish government has undertaken complete reorganization of its military forces," the document added, and "every Turkish village and town along the frontier is swarming with infantry and artillerymen, while rifles and cartridges are distributed among the peasants."

In Eastern Thrace, Bulgaria charged, Turkey has piled up supplies of munitions, foodstuffs and clothing "like on the eve of war."

Even this was judged insufficient, the statement continued, for Turkey "prepared the mobilization of Thracian reservists on March 1 and, these reservists, being few in number in relation to the meager population, Turkey sent reinforcements of 24,000 soldiers."

'A Prophetess Of World War' Again Alarmed

Rosika Schwimmer Urges Federation of Nations to Insure Peace.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 7.—Mme. Rosika Schwimmer—whom Lloyd George credits with prophesying the World War—described the situation today as "worse than in 1914."

"The whole world is just one big danger spot," said the woman who gained international fame as the dynamic leader of the Henry Ford peace expedition in 1915. "The menace lurks in Europe, in Asia—everywhere. No matter where the conflict starts, all the nations will be in at the finish."

She envisioned a world federation of all nations as the one agency to stave off this fate.

"Civilization Doomed."

"And if that is not accomplished," she warned with an emphatic nod of a graying head, "civilization is doomed."

"It would not be the League of Nations, a league of conquerors," she added. "It would be a superstructure to contain all nations but would allow them to retain their individuality and their own social, political and economic life. It would bring them all together to make the world safe against war."

Confined to the Presbyterian Hospital while undergoing treatment for diabetes, she reached into a portable library, took down Lloyd George's book of memoirs and opened it to this passage:

"I remember that in July (1914) a Hungarian lady told me the assassination of the archduke would result in war."

Mme. Schwimmer has aged somewhat since that memorable visit to the British Liberal leader but has retained the vigor that was hers when she carried her fight for citizenship to the United States Supreme Court in 1929. Her request was denied because of her refusal to bear arms.

"Zangara Bore Arms."

"Giuseppe Zangara was admitted to citizenship when I was turned down," she asserted. "That seems an absurdity. He swore he would bear arms—and he bore them."

She referred to Zangara's attempt to shoot President-elect Roosevelt at Miami. Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, was fatally wounded by a stray shot.

Her hope of ultimately becoming one of Uncle Sam's subjects now rests on a bill introduced by Representative O'Day, of New York. It provides that religious views or philosophical opinions against war shall not debar aliens from citizenship.

"If this is adopted," she promised, "I shall reapply for citizenship."

What is Mme. Schwimmer's status? She defined it thus:

"I am a woman without a country. I devoted most of my life to the struggle for suffrage. Now I have no vote. It is the irony of fate."

Mayor May Quit Job; Pittsburgh in Turmoil

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 7.—City Hall was in turmoil tonight while Mayor William N. McNair pondered the question—to quit or not to quit.

The State Legislature, at Harrisburg, has before it a bill that would strip him of his executive Mayoralty power.

McNair, the first Democratic mayor Pittsburgh has had in 26 years, was quoted by close friends as saying he would resign first.

At odds with the Democratic organization which sponsored him, he previously threatened to step aside and give the job to Robert Garland, president of city council, a Republican.

The hub-bub at City Hall gripped all offices. The fortunes of many appointees and job-holders may be involved.

Peace Talk Action Put Up to Hitler

fidence that Eden would handle the job satisfactorily.

To other questioners who wanted to know whether the Berlin trip must not precede the Warsaw and Moscow visits, the foreign secretary retorted:

"There is no compulsion about the matter. This is a free country."

Simon's forceful statements, coupled with the announcement of the Government's determination to pursue its plans for ministerial visits to other countries regardless of whether Hitler renews the invitation to Simon, was taken to be plain warning to the Reich that it may be left out in the cold in the setting up of the proposed security system.

Last night the Government had indicated it expected another date for Simon's visit would be set soon, but continued delay seemed to be irking British officials.

They insisted, however, that they still hope to carry out the original schedule, on which Berlin is first. The matter, however, is entirely up to Berlin, they added.

A spokesman said Eden's visits would take place within the next few weeks if possible. It is known no formal invitation has yet been received from the Eastern capitals, although the Russians and Poles both have indicated they would be issued as soon as unofficial invitations to send some minister are accepted.

Love Held Factor In Martin's Death

Young Millionaire Called Sad at Separation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 7.—Samuel Klump Martin 3d, young millionaire who was found dead Sunday of a heart attack in Savannah, Ga., "died broken-hearted and his separation from his wife, the former Mary Jane of the Ziegfeld Follies, was one of the contributory causes of his death," Martin's attorney, Emanuel B. Cohen, said today.

Martin, who was 26, had been melancholy since last October, when he and his wife separated, Cohen said. The young man inherited a $9,000,000 estate from his grandfather, Otto Young, Chicago merchant.

Cohen said Mrs. Martin, who is on her way back from Europe, will receive the Martin estate, Marwood, in Montgomery County, Md., under the State law.

Cuban Strikes Gaining Force, ImperilRegime

But Mendieta Government Feels Confident It Can Weather the Storm.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, March 7.—The Mendieta government, in militant mood, tonight appeared convinced it could weather the storm of strikes stirred up by its enemies despite the desertion of many of its own employes.

Virtual censorship was clapped on the Cuban press after yesterday's outburst of terrorism, in which two men died and twelve were injured. The administration seemed determined to deal drastically, if need be, with its adversaries.

With three government departments—labor, education and treasury—paralyzed by strikes and two others tempered by the desertion of employes, there were reports that another postoffice strike, such as that last year when mails were destroyed or tied up for weeks, was being prepared.

Military Forces Active.

This prospect the government ttle relished, and it gathered its rces to nip any such movement possible.

The government, with Army Commander Fulgencio Batista personally steering its course, showed as much or more belligerency as the strikers.

Soldiers still occupied Havana University, seat of the spreading school strike which has involved an estimated 300,000 persons. There was no indication that they were preparing to evacuate despite the fact that the university grounds are guaranteed against invasion under the Cuban constitution.

Strike Gaining Ground.

In Havana and elsewhere in the islands the strikers appeared to be gaining ground.

A survey showed the treasury, education and labor departments out on strike, the justice department approximately 50 per cent affected, the state and communications departments and city hall due to suffer the strike wave tomorrow, and only the war and navy, public works, interior, commerce and health departments still immune to the strike epidemic.

Interior points affected included Santiago, where the public works, customs and internal revenue departments were idle; Camaguey, where labor, education and internal revenue employes were striking; Matanzas, where labor employes were out; Manzanillo, Caimanera and Guatanamo, where customs and internal revenue employes had joined the movement.

Ex-Secretary's Daughter Dies.

Prince Ananda II Proclaimed Siam's Ruler Under Regency

By the Associated Press.

Bangkok, Siam, March 7.—Prince Ananda Mahidol, a boy of 11 years, was proclaimed the new monarch of Siam today as the government gazette formally announced the acceptance of King Prajadhipok's abdication "with profound regret."

A regency council which will administer state affairs until the king reaches his majority will consist of Prince Anuvatana, elderly member of royalty and one-time aid de camp to the queen; Prince Abitaya, until recently the king's principal private secretary, and Chao Phya Yomarj, 75-year-old commoner, who was supreme grand councilor and interior minister in the absolute monarchy.

A government communique assured the people peace and order and the monarchy will be maintained.

Ordered by his people to return and receive their homage, Ananda expressed a preference for Lausanne and toys to Bangkok and a sceptre.

"Are you glad to be king?" he was asked.

"No," Ananda replied. "I like to play—with locomotives and trains."

His mother, Princess Mahidol, sister-in-law of former King Prajadhipok, said: "I hope they will allow him to stay here some time because he is not very strong and requires the mountain air."

Siamese quarters intimated, however, that the prince must return to Bangkok immediately with his mother for the coronation. It was likely, though, that the new king's schooling would be interrupted only for a short time. The ceremonies may be cut short and simplified because of the king's youth.

Definite plans for the return to Bangkok were not announced.

200 Rescued as Fire Destroys Sulphur Ship

Antofagasta, Chile, March 7 (AP). Two hundred persons were rescued from the steamer Biobio today after a fire believed to have been incendiary, destroyed the sulphur-laden craft a few miles off shore.

The ship left port yesterday and radioed for help a few hours later. Marine authorities sent out a small ship which, with several launches, removed the passengers. The latter were in a panic because of the menacing sulphur fumes. The ship was destroyed.

Credit to Publishers Promised by Coughlin

New York, March 7 (AP).—Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, talked by telephone late today with Harcourt, Brace & Co., publishers, who had charged "almost half" of the priest's radio speech last Sunday was taken from one of their publications.

They announced the priest informed the company full credit would be given in the printed version to be distributed shortly.

English Board Plans Probe of Speculation

By the Associated Press.

London, March 7.—A probe into commodity speculation "right down to the bottom" was promised today by Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, as the House of Commons staged a lengthy debate involving pepper, shellac and tin.

An official receiver would undertake an inquiry into the failure of James & Shakespeare, Ltd., and an associated company, Runciman said, adding that there was not "even a whisper of suspicion" attached to the government.

Oil Tax Voted in Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City, March 7 (AP).—The Oklahoma Senate passed today a 4 per cent gross production tax on oil. The bill slashed the 8 per cent House-approved rate in half and added a "truth telling" amendment giving authorities the right to investigate production reports of oil companies.

Liquor Firm Accused Of Permitting Gaming

The proprietors of the Segretti & Zimmerman retail liquor store in the 1300 block of North Capitol street, were cited before the liquor board yesterday to show cause why their liquor license should not be revoked on charges of permitting gaming on the premises and selling beer for consumption in the store. The hearing will be concluded today.

Heads In The Sand.

Senator Byrd's resolution calling for data from the PWA has a profound underlying significance. It calls attention to the fact that a vast new public works program is about to be launched with little or no reference to the experience of the Administration in this field during the last eighteen months. Certainly this is not the experimental method, which implies that one is willing to learn from experience.

The junior Senator from Virginia suggests that before Congress appropriates nearly $5,000,000,000 for work-relief it should find out how the PWA has spent the $3,300,000,000 appropriated for that purpose in 1933, and what has been accomplished thereby. This procedure, of course, should have been the very first step in the formulation of a new job-creating plan. That the work-relief bill has advanced to the last stages of legislation without any detailed congressional consideration of what the PWA has to teach in this field, throws into bold relief the slipshod manner in which this enterprise has been advanced.

Rough estimates place the expenditures of the PWA at a little more than $2,000,000,000. That organization does not seem to know exactly how much of its appropriation actually has been spent. The number of jobs which it has created is guesswork, but there is a good deal of support for the conclusion that the net effect on unemployment has been small. Congress would be foolhardy indeed to approve a vast new outlay for public works without a clear understanding of what past efforts in this direction have accomplished.

The FERA announces, perhaps with one eye on the Senate, that the record number of 22,375,000 persons is receiving relief from the Government. Unquestionably this deplorable situation emphasizes the need for more jobs. It does not follow, however, that a basic improvement can be made by huge expenditure on public works. By calling attention to the appalling relief burden the Administration, on the contrary, indicates the failure of the PWA to supplant the dole by specially created jobs. Is there any ground for belief that the work-relief experiment now contemplated would be relatively more successful than the PWA has been?

Senator Byrd is to be commended for his efforts to compel the Senate to face up to reality. It is time for Congress to stop toying with propositions that ignore the lessons of experience. If a public works bill is enacted it should be a logical sequence to the PWA. And expectations from such a program should be based on lessons from the past rather than wishful thinking for the future.

An Objective Viewpoint.

A comprehensive report on "Economic and Trade Conditions in the United States of America," by H. O. Chalkley, the Commercial Counsellor of the British Embassy, has just been published by the Department of Overseas Trade. This study is intended for the British public, especially British business men. It is for that very reason a document well worth the attention of thoughtful Americans.

Current political, social and economic developments are seldom analyzed and discussed by native Americans with the objective detachment that foreigners are able to achieve. We are too intimately affected by changes of policy and usually too influenced by early training or present environment to take an unprejudiced view of our own institutions. Moreover, the American with sufficient philosophic detachment to divest himself of such hampering prejudices is not always endowed with a keen understanding of the affairs of everyday life.

The trained foreign observer who has had an opportunity to acquire direct information of conditions in this country is, on the other hand, capable of surveying the American scene with an impartiality that makes his conclusions exceptionally illuminating. For that reason, Mr. Chalkley's report is a valuable addition to the extensive literature of the New Deal.

His incidental comments, in particular, are a genuine contribution. For instance, he defines the objectives of the recovery program as follows: "It is not a plan for the socialization of the means of production and operation of industry, nor for the confiscation and redistribution of acquired wealth, but rather a program for the creation and diffusion of effective purchasing power, to be brought about by the expenditure of public funds, the pledge of the public credit and the exercise of the taxing power for the provision of work and relief, accompanied by State action on currency, private indebtedness, agricultural prices, wages and the conditions of employment."

It is then pointed out with dispassionate logic that the restriction plans run counter to the aims of the program, since they eliminate a substantial part of the real wealth of the Nation.

Probably the most arresting feature of the general comment, however, is the emphasis placed upon the provisional character of the positive achievements so far recorded, and the impossibility of passing final judgment upon the recovery program at this juncture. That attitude of suspended judgment is difficult for Americans to sustain. They are inclined either to predict defeat or assume that recovery is assured. Mr. Chalkley can assess the cost of the New Deal more calmly and conclude that our ability to finance it is "impossible of estimation until it is brought to an end or incorporated in a balanced budget."

The Armament Race.

The British military estimates for 1935, representing an increase of almost exactly fifty million dollars—at current exchange rates—over those of last year, are not in themselves a serious evidence of the world-wide growth of militarism. No single step of this nature ever is. Moreover his majesty's government can, and doubtless will, argue that the increased expenditure which it asks is far less than that which our own services are now demanding from Congress. Great Britain's proposed national defense budget, totaling approximately $590,000,000, contrasts not unfavorably with the $792,000,000 requested for this purpose in President Roosevelt's last budget message.

Much more significant than the actual figures is the fact that Great Britain is abandoning, as this country has abandoned, its undoubtedly sincere efforts to secure at least a measure of disarmament. And it is a matter for very sober reflection when Great Britain and the United States join the general hysterical stampede which, if continued, can only result in another world war.

Behind such national "preparedness" programs there are always powerful forces. Their influence in any country is greatly augmented when other nations begin to arm heavily. A vicious circle is then created which steadily becomes more difficult to cut. For this reason the collapse of the Disarmament Conference and the reckless programs of military expenditure on which virtually all countries are embarking as a result are matters of grave concern to all who possess any power of foresight.

In this situation no intelligent person will be satisfied by the superficial argument that Nation X must arm because Nation Y is arming. It is too apparent that the nationals of Y are using exactly the same argument in reverse. At the closing end of this chain of reasoning—blaming it on the other fellow—lies the completely catastrophic war which the great majority of people everywhere wish to avert. But what lies at the opening end? What has started the armament race which is now pressing with ever-greater intensity on a world still staggering from its last debauch of belligerency? Is any solution suggested if the historical sequence is carefully examined?

At the close of the World War a great opportunity to start fresh on the subject of national security was presented to mankind. In the launching of the League of Nations, in the energetic preliminaries for the Disarmament Conference, in the tangible achievements of the Washington Naval Conference are seen the valiant efforts which were made to seize that opportunity. They have failed neither because of munition makers nor because mankind wants war. They have failed primarily because of a simple blunder with two separate parts—the attempt to enforce compulsory disarmament on the defeated powers, while refusing to honor the pledge in the Treaty of Versailles which made that specified disarmament a preliminary to universal action in this field.

Soon or late the failure of the victorious nations to redeem that pledge was bound to result in surreptitious arming by Germany. Such action, particularly under fanatical leadership, could only cause fear, and therefore further arms increases, among Germany's neighbors. The atmosphere of growing suspicion, unsuccessfully disguised by the ineffective idealism of Geneva, inevitably encouraged the realistic Japanese to grab while the grabbing was good. The result: more fears, more arming, an ever-widening spread of the malignant prairie fire of thinly-veiled antagonisms and ominous preparations.

Today, recriminations in these matters can only feed fuel to the flames. The problem of civilization is not futile argument over who has the greater responsibility for what has come about. The problem is how to stem the mounting tide. Only in two ways can this be done. One is by resuming the collective effort for disarmament on a basis of real equality among the negotiating states. The other is by a truly courageous stand on the part of those nations which have least to fear from their neighbors. The first method could end the present vicious circle by liquidating it; the second method could end it by a cut.

From an objective viewpoint it is becoming apparent that the Anglo-Saxon nations are today laggard in giving more than lip service to the cause of peace. Great Britain is inclined to meet the collapse of the Disarmament Conference by arming against, instead of treating with, Germany. The United States is disposed to throw its hat into the armament ring with a belligerent shout.

Of course the policy of both governments can be explained, excused and justified. There are lots of stones to throw at the glass houses of others. But hurling those tempting stones will do less than nothing to solve the problem at hand. The present Administration has had the courage and the statesmanship to try to break the vicious circle of mounting tariff barriers. It is curious that it should be so apathetic in face of the far more serious trend which is rapidly turning the world into a cluster of armed camps.

On Sober Second Thought.

The Ways and Means Committee has reported favorably upon a bill to repeal the publicity section of the revenue act of 1934 and it is believed that the House will approve the measure within a few days. The senatorial upholders of this drastic publicity requirement have also weakened perceptibly in face of the barrage of reasonable criticism which it has aroused.

Even such supposedly adamantine opponents of the repeal proposal as Senators La Follette and Couzens are said to be willing to accept a milder substitute plan. Sufficient safeguards against tax evasion are provided by granting discretionary powers to the President and the Secretary of the Treasury to make returns public, as contemplated in the House bill.

Certainly, Senator La Follette can not hope for any moral support from the tax commissioner of his own State in a campaign to force pitiless publicity upon income tax payers. That official reports that the system as applied in Wisconsin has been a "source of nuisance by credit agencies, bond salesmen and business competitors. We have had no instance where public inspection has brought forth unreported incomes and, although a matter of conjecture, we believe it has retarded the making of complete returns."

Experience is not needed, however, to demonstrate the futility and the mischief-making potentialities of the pink slips. In face of the vigorous protests that have come from every section of the country, Congress should act promptly to remove the anxiety felt by those who appreciate the opportunities afforded for illegitimate use of the published returns of income when thrown open to indiscriminate inspection.

Antiseptic.

A large section of public interest, fastened for the past month or so on the tragic and unhealthy proceedings at Flemington, is now turned toward Fall River, Mass., where a miracle of surgery has been performed. For two hours surgeons concentrated all the skill and knowledge at their command to right the internal organs of a little girl whose stomach had been inverted since birth.

This surgical feat deserves mention for itself alone. But it is all the more remarkable when a review of medicine shows that only two generations ago few surgeons, however great, dared to perform major operations, because of the risk of infection. And until a century ago anaesthetics had never been used at the operating table.

The marvelous accuracy and skill of Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale, chief surgeon in this operation, has been praised alike by laymen and fellow doctors. But it is the young patient herself who is receiving the major part of attention. Letters and telegrams flow in, commending her on the cheerful fortitude and patience which she has exhibited during the trying months prior to her removal to the hospital.

These messages of good cheer, most of them from complete strangers, show a complete reversal from the unnatural and morbid curiosity exhibited at the recent trial in New Jersey. At that time, numerous articles and editorials were written commenting on the ghoulish appetite of the public. It is something of a vindication when comparable concern is shown by people in the fate of a smiling child fighting for her life.

Good For The Board!

For its vote of confidence in Dr. Charters, consultant in character education, the Board of Education deserves the fullest measure of congratulation.

Investigation substantiated the "charges" that he was a member of an advisory council assisting the Institute of International Education in promoting cultural exchanges between Russia and America—as between other countries—through fellowships and professorial visits. The board found nothing irregular in this. As a rational group it probably found the enterprise praiseworthy.

In likewise refusing to consider action against a current events weekly for school children which had carried articles on Russia, the board gave further evidence of its sense of proportion. Such an attitude would be taken for a matter of course except for current efforts to glorify bigotry, intolerance and ignorance as "patriotic."

An Arctic explorer reports that Eskimos give their children dice for toys. This is probably the only kind of toy which is harmless for a child but dangerous for an adult to play with.

If you would keep a friend, don't give him advice or lend him money.

The Fiscal Nudes.

From the Chicago Daily Tribune.

A citizen who has his dander up has called upon his fellows to throw away the pink slip received with the income tax blanks and tell the collector to chase himself around his office. Every citizen who has been pink-slipped may feel that Bunker Hill should have been retained with permanent breastworks for the shooting off of muskets.

The pink slip is the added indignity to the Government's nudity campaign. It makes the citizen shed his own garments. He strips himself to save the internal revenue collector the trouble. He can howl, but that's all. If he does not prepare his financial statement for exposure the collector will do it and charge him $5. With $5 he can buy tobacco and go forth in a cloud of smoke.

"To Discourage Borrowing."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If you will permit me space in your columns, I can probably enlighten Messrs. George Mason, A. W. Dew, and others whose letters you have published as to reasons back of the charge of 6 per cent on loans made on converted war risk insurance policies.

Several years ago I was compelled to make a loan on my policy and when interest at the rate of 6 per cent was demanded I immediately took the matter up with officials of the insurance division of the Veterans' Bureau, as I knew that actuarial basis on which the policies were issued was not over 3½ per cent and I was at the time borrowing money on insurance policies issued by a private company at a rate of 5 per cent.

The only reason whatsoever that the Veterans' Bureau could give me in justification of a rate of 6 per cent was that they wished to discourage policyholders borrowing upon their policies.

Now, I submit that this is paternalism at its worst. Few, if any, men will borrow on their life insurance and jeopardize the future of their families unless it is absolutely necessary, and this attitude on the part of the bureau has imposed an additional burden on thousands of veterans when they could least afford to bear it. There is nothing fair about it and no justification for it, as any actuary will tell you. The loans are all secured 100 per cent, as they only loan you the reserve set up against your policy.

I am one of those veterans who has opposed payment of the bonus, but I do believe Congress could correct an injustice if some pressure could be brought on the Veterans' Bureau to force it to reduce interest on these loans to a fair rate. VETERAN.

Schools Not To Lead.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of February 27 on "Academic Freedom," and the item "Ballou Assails Teaching New Social Theories," which appeared in the same issue, set forth contrasted points of view on the same subject.

How far teachers of youth should enjoy the right to free speech has been an engaging theme from the days of Socrates until now. Schools are established as institutions to impart and uphold the body of doctrine and belief approved by the society which establishes and supports them. Their chief function is not to reform, but to fulfill.

The reformers of the world have always gone outside of the breastworks of established institutions. Those who accept assignments under any institution are supposed to abide by the laws and regulations which govern it and to keep within the framework of its doctrines and precepts. It is not for the school to lead thought and opinion, but to follow and perpetuate that which has been handed down by tradition.

Those who feel called upon to launch forth upon new religious, political, or social theories should not expect to do so under shelter and protection of institutions built on the old foundations. The pioneers, the prophets, the reformers, who blazed new paths, command the highest esteem among their fellowmen after their reforms have been accepted and approved, but they may expect the abuse and condemnation of their contemporaries. One generation stones prophets, another builds them monuments.

The seeker after truth who hopes to change the existing mould of opinion and cast of thought, must have the courage of his ambition. He need not expect the conservative public to build and support schools and colleges to furnish him a platform to upset or overthrow them. KELLY MILLER.

Civil Service Laugh.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There's a good laugh in Morgan Baker's "Federal Diary" column of March 1. After quoting the view of Chief Clerk Switzer, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that emergency agency employes should take competitive instead of non-competitive examinations to secure permanent civil service status, Baker continues, apparently quoting from Representative Sirovich: "Such a plan would almost totally disrupt the New Deal agencies by causing a wholesale upset in personnel."

In other words, if the political appointees in the New Deal agencies had to take open competitive examinations, instead of the secret noncompetitive examinations which they hope to get from a partisan Civil Service Commission, most of them would lose their jobs through plain ignorance of everything but "practical politics!" This is just what advocates of the merit system have been claiming all along.

Missing The Point.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed in the press recently a statement that a United States Senator had remarked that the country would willingly cede the present State of Louisiana back to the French government for a case of champagne or a box of good cigars.

Why should a country which has produced Mrs. Charles Sabin wish to part with a State which has produced Hilda Phelps Hammond?

A Note On Tactics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial this morning, "Thank You, General," advertizes Gen. Johnson's speech of Monday night attacking Father Coughlin and Huey Long. As customary, the general was attractive in talk but lacked accomplishment. He forgot first principles of tactics, "Divide and Command." He attacked two forces not united in fundamentals until joined by the instinct of self-defense.

He fell short of Burke's declaration that "the two necessary features of civilization are the spirit of a gentleman and the spirit of religion." His attacks upon Father Coughlin will be an incentive to that militant man. Had the general's ghost writer known more of Talleyrand he would not have been dragged into this speech. Talleyrand was placed under the ban of the church when he was 37 and remained outside the fold for almost 50 years, when evidence of repentance reconciled him to the old faith.

Choice barrack room revelry brought in Judas Iscariot, then the general's ten points of egoism, for his love for the church, its priests, etc., followed by his refined word of "prostitution" of the priest's holy office, his suggestive smut of the bundling party of Huey Long and Father Coughlin, his sneers at the "dripping brogue of the Canadian-Irish priest," his jeers at the "Gregorian chant intoned in Latin" all prove how little the general knows of the affection of Catholics for their parish priests.

Of course, the general hurries his denial of intention to compare Father Coughlin with Talleyrand or Iscariot. It would be a freshman's trick to cite the general's own words, "that it was time for some one to get up on his hind legs and howl," the hyena's favorite method of attack. Of course, we won't compare Gen. Johnson to a hyena.

Nor will we seize upon his own admission "I am well aware what the papers will say about me—that I am either drunk or crazy." Statistics can not sustain the number of people willing to believe both possibilities.

If Gen. Johnson will confine himself strictly to Huey Long he will find fertile field for his barrack-room stuff.

Baton Rouge—the red stick of the South—will invite the red stuff in the general's eye and soul for mortal combat in politics. But he should stay away from church. There are those who will approach the reverend father in a virile but not a vulgar manner. His political delusions will be punctured, his John Law theories of finance will be exposed, his schemes of fantastic political future ridiculed, his money vagaries shown to be fallacious, but all will be done by those who respect his rank and refuse to allow his office to be outraged by comparisons with rejected outcasts of bygone days. Father Coughlin will be admonished in time, but the power to silence can never be invoked by the employment of such coarse words as came from the general's mouth Monday night.

Munitions For Propagandists.

Pilot Leland Andrews has clipped 25 minutes from Maj. Doolittle's recent Los Angeles-New York record, making the flight in 11 hours, 34 minutes and 16 seconds. Splendid as is this achievement, it is regrettable that it will be immediately seized upon by jingo propagandists, who will shout in chain newspapers across the continent: "We are no longer secure. See how easily the Japanese can come and bomb us now."

They are certain to do so, for they have done exactly that each time a new record has been made. They never cry: "See how easily we can fly and bomb the Japanese." That is left to the jingo press of Japan.

Together with the bombing by American farmers of Japanese farms in Arizona, and the arrest and parading through the streets of Americans in Japan, the jingo propaganda which follows each new aviation speed or distance record maintains an atmosphere which is a perfect culture for war-germs which could not thrive in healthy air.

The Post Impressionist

Sir Richard On The Loom

Post Office, Friday.

NOT only lovers of art in general, and of the art of tapestry in particular, should be interested by a discovery made the other day through the Brussels Musee du Cinquantenaire. Historians should be interested. So should be everybody who knows Stanford's music or who still reads Tennyson's poetry.

The find is that comparatively rare thing in tapestries, outside of Holland—the depiction of a naval battle. And two experts—one of them the director of England's National Maritime Museum—agree that it is a contemporary record of the event which Lord Alfred celebrated in his ballad of "The Revenge."

Heretofore the earliest known records of Sir Richard Grenville's exploit were Raleigh's "Truth of the Fight About the Iles of the Acores" and the account given (1598) in Van Linschoten's "Itinerario."

Remember the story?

Late in the August of 1591, the admiral Lord Thomas Howard and his tiny fleet were at anchor off Flores when were warned of the approach of a Spanish sail—and ran away. But not the vice admiral, Grenville.

"I never turned my back on don or devil yet," said that commander of the little Revenge.

So, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon he laid his course into the midst of the attackers.

One big galleon, the San Filipe, got the wind of The Revenge and Grenville. Two others, says Raleigh, "laid him aborde." Fifteen more joined the fight.

Throughout the remaining daylight the battle continued—throughout the night. The Spaniards again and again attempted to rush the British deck—were always repulsed. The San Felipe had to quit. One by one sister ships followed her, but dawn, though it found the Revenge fighting, found her still cruelly outnumbered.

She was a wreck. Forty men out of her complement of a hundred were killed. Grenville himself was shot in the head and body.

He ordered his master-gunner to blow up the hulk. It was only when the vice admiral became unconscious from the wounds which were three days later to prove fatal that he was disobeyed and honorable surrender negotiated.

Even then. The Revenge was not to be dragged into port as a captive thing. The prize-crew had not much more than settled themselves on her before a gale destroyed both her and above a dozen of her shattered captors.

"So," reads the old account, "it pleased them to honour the burial of that renowned ship, not suffering her to perish alone, for the great honour she achieved in her lifetime."

It was a mad deed, this, of Sir Richard. But it was sublimely mad. Somebody once remarked to Stevenson that it set "a pestilent example." Stevenson's reaction was serene speculation upon how many people have been inspired to saving heroism by that mad example.

The tapestry found in Brussels was photographed and the photographs sent to Expert H. C. Marillier, in England. Would he please try to identify the subject?

At first he thought that it might be a part of the famous Armada series woven for Queen Elizabeth and long lost to the world. There was a chance, too, that the work might belong to the scattered set commemorating the victory over Ruyter at Sole Bay in 1672. But both these hypotheses had to be discarded when Mr. Marillier secured from Brussels colored reproductions of the individual pennants flown by the vessels.

Then, he reports in the London Times, "we were able to work out an identification confirming all the recorded details of what is, I suppose—apart from Trafalgar—the most spectacular naval battle of English history."

It appears the tapestry shows an early part of the engagement. "The Revenge, with her foremast shot away, has two Spaniards on her starboard side and two on her larboard. The two ships to starboard are flagships, and probably represent the San Palo and the San Felipe. The former, bearing the flag of De Becan at her main topmast head, is to the left of the Revenge, and the rest of the Spanish fleet is clustered farther off."

As to the origin of the work—a lovely specimen, woven in part with threads of gold and silver—and as to why it remained for over three centuries unknown to connoisseurs, Mr. Marillier offers little. It is privately owned and seems to have been sent to the Brussels institution merely for identification. However, there is already talk of purchasing it for the British Maritime Museum—and then perhaps its history may be unravelled.

Meantime, it is enough for the Post-Impressionist that Sir Richard Grenville has, after all, his place in tapestry as well as in verse and music. He was a "dark, bullying fellow;" he chewed wine glasses like any Blackbeard of the Spanish Main.

But he could fight—and he didn't mind dying.

British Commons Put Ministers 'On Carpet'

Harlan Bill Proposes Similar Questioning Period In American Congress.

By J. Kerwin Williams.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

REPRESENTATIVE HARLAN, of Ohio, in proposing that Cabinet members be subject to questioning on the floor of Congress, has focused American attention upon the British method of checking the executive. The scheme put forward for the United States is a ...dification of the English "question hour" in the House of Commons, ...evice which members of Parliament regard as indispensable in keeping ...them informed on the efficiency of the Cabinet. Since 1849 the ...itish House of Commons has thought it necessary to reserve a daily period for the questioning of ministers.

At the approach of the question hour, which usually lasts from 3:30 until 4:15 in the afternoon, the galleries of the House of Commons are crowded in anticipation of the most interesting battle of the legislative day. The spectators know that they may see some of Britain's highest officials personally called to account for the way they have managed the business of their particular department.

Looking down from the galleries, visitors can easily see the members of the government seated in the front row of green leather benches to the right of the speaker, ready to answer the questions which have been submitted to them several days in advance. Each minister on the ...ved "treasury bench" grasps ...ndle of typewritten answers. ...the front "opposition benches," ...across the aisle from the ministers, sit the members of the minority party, who will provide most of the fireworks in the question hour.

All the members of the House are in possession of copies of the official parliamentary program called the "Orders of the Day," a white folio paper of many pages on which the questions are printed. The flutter and rustle of these white sheets of paper always characterizes the Commons during the question hour.

ALTHOUGH the rules forbid queries containing "argument, inference, imputation, epithet, ...ironical expression," few of the members confine their questions to colorless requests for bits of information.

Dragging a minister over the coals is frequently their real object. If the Secretary of State for India is suspect, or his policies disliked, he may be questioned so closely on the government's intentions toward India that he may find it impossible to answer without incurring a vote of censure and bringing about a fall of the cabinet. Any maladministration that exists is almost certain to be raked up as the result of a ...netrating question. In the words of an American political writer, Dr. ...ndsay Rogers, "It is probable that ...d cabinet members been in the habit of making appearances on the ...or of Congress, some of the 1924 ...andals would have been avoided. ...s certainly true that in England ...h a plethora of wrong-doing and ...ficiency never appears."

On the other hand, questions are sometimes asked by friends of a minister simply to enable him to get publicity for matters like the successful settlement of a strike or the construction of an admirable sewage system for Lower Tooting.

* * * *

THE learned air with which a minister reads the answers to his questions often cloaks the fact that the spade-work for the information was done for him by illustrious subordinates in his department. On occasion, however, the mask may slip, as when a minister once read to the house not only the answer to a question but also the note which his efficient private secretary had attached. The startled commoners heard him rethink like this: "The answer to the question is in the negative . . . but this member is being very tiresome; to give him any information will only whets his appetite for more!" Nevertheless, a minister can not always get away with complete ignorance of his departmental business. Frequently, after he has read his typewritten answers, supplementary questions "arising out of the printed answers" are flung at him from the floor.

In such a cross-examination, it behooves a minister who wants to keep his job to display as much personal knowledge of his department's affairs as he can muster.

The rules of the House of Commons, however, keep supplementary questions at a minimum. Most questions require previous notice, and the answers are prepared by departmental clerks.

Indeed, the chief flaw in this English method of checking on the executive is the expensive research needed on so many parliamentary questions. As each member is allowed to put down as many as four questions daily, the number of queries in one question hour often reaches 150 or 200, and the total for an entire session climbs into the thousands. The average cost to British taxpayers is equal to approximately $5 per question.

* * * *

IT IS true that a British minister can refuse to answer certain questions put to him in the House of Commons. He usually takes care, however, to justify his refusal on the ground that a public answer would be against the interests of the nation. This plea is naturally resorted to most often when Parliament is probing into foreign policy or delicate diplomatic negotiations.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, for example, successfully repelled questions on disarmament in 1932, and his ministers refused to answer pointed questions on Indian policy when the government was preparing to deal with the India delegates a few years ago. Even in such cases, however, if Parliament should feel that a minister is being deliberately or unnecessarily evasive, or is displaying an ignorance that should not exist in high places, it is perfectly free to vote lack of confidence in him, which may result in the overturn of the entire cabinet.

Questions do not, of themselves, always cause a debate or a vote. At the close of the questioning, however, it is in order for any dissatisfied M. P. to move "to adjourn to discuss a definite matter of urgent importance." If this motion is supported by at least 40 members, a debate takes place, theoretically on the motion to adjourn but really on the subject involved in the question and answer. The ministers on the government bench oppose the motion, for if it is carried the whole cabinet, or at least the minister directly affected, must resign.

IN actual practice, the question hour has seldom brought with it the immediate upset of a cabinet. Yet the British consider the device of utmost value as a safety valve for use in emergencies. They have found, too, that the system not only helps keep the administration of the country toeing the mark, but, as President Lowell of Harvard observed, "it prevents the growth of that bureaucratic arrogance which is quite unknown in England."

British cabinet officers are therefore in a very different situation from American officials, who can play the role of a clam with very little risk to their jobs and without having to account for their silence. No matter how embattled an American Congress may be, it has never yet had the opportunity to fling a daily barrage of questions directly at the President or the members of his Cabinet. In important cases, of course, a congressional investigation of a department may be set afoot, but this method smacks a good deal of locking the stable after the horse has been taken.

Despite the advantages of the questioning system as it works in England, Mr. Harlan does not suggest, nor would the Congress accept, a direct transplantation of the English question hour to Capitol Hill. If the question method is adopted here, its function will not be to make and unmake cabinets, as in England, but merely to disclose to Congress the way in which Cabinet officers are administering their departments. The proponents of the Harlan plan believe that the country would thus be kept informed of the plans of administrators, and a constant check could be maintained on the honesty and efficiency of all Government agencies.

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Surprise!

THE WHITE HOUSE correspondents, those fellows who go around with Mr. Roosevelt all the time and know his thoughts and everything, really ought to quit playing with our emotions. With deft manipulation of the strings they get us all keyed up and then let us down. They toy with us as though we were babes in the woods, and infants, it might be said, we are in their hands.

BARGERON.

Time and again the boys work our expectancy up to a fever pitch and then with an unusual facility they let us drop.

There was the matter, now, of the works bill. While they were up at Hyde Park we became quite alarmed. Apprehensions were expressed that the President had lost the reins. Dark days, it seemed, were approaching again. Could he or could he not make some utterance or gesture to retake command of the situation?

* * * *

As soon as the boys got back they began assuring us this was exactly what Mr. Roosevelt would do. With their little stories in the papers they told us to expect something presently. Just what it was we were not told. This is the way the White House boys do us. But be prepared for something, they said.

We were left alone with our imaginations as to what it would be. Was he to come out with some such ringing utterance as that one about chasing the money changers from the temple, or that one about our worst fear being fear itself—anyhow, something that would send the warm blood coursing the country's veins?

There was no telling what it was to be. Day after day the boys would say "just wait. He is preparing to do something which will knock your eye out." One can imagine the mood into which we worked ourselves.

The only thing of which we had reason to be convinced was that whatever it was he said it would not be an explanation of the bill. This would have been entirely too much, not only for us but for Mr. Roosevelt. There is reason to believe an explanation of it is impossible.

Anyway, in our mental fumblings around we at no time entertained the thought that is what it would be. It had to be something else but we assumed that whatever it was it would be something grand.

* * * *

So help me goodness, all it turned out to be was a promise to the two Vermont Senators that their State would get some pork. This is all it took to break the works bill deadlock.

At the outset we had assumed this would be the outcome. In fact, this writer could never see the dark despair of the situation at any time. But a desperate situation it was said to be and there followed the assurances that Mr. Roosevelt had a bold stroke in mind to get out of it. Drama, sheer drama, that's what it was.

Then the climax had to be nothing more than a promise to the two Vermont Senators that they would get some pork. This is no stroke in the first place and it is not bold in the second. It is a very old, tried and proven trick. A very simple thing, it works every time.

* * * *

We are coming to understand, however, why the Senators are always deprecating and investigating the lobbyists, why they are always denouncing them and holding them up to scorn. It seems very clear when you consider the action of the two Vermont Senators that the Senators, as a whole, envy the lobbyists. Instead of looking upon the lobbyists' activities as unfriendly toward the Government, as the Senators profess to do, it appears their opposition is based upon entirely different grounds.

A lobbyist knocking off a slice of pork for his client the size of what Senators Gibson and Austin are to get would receive 10 per cent, or $25,000 or $50,000 for the one job. The Senators only receive $10,000 a year.

No End of Books

"Of Time And The River," Thomas Wolfe's Great Novel Of Man's Hunger In His Youth.

By Theodore Hall.

A YOUNG man is standing, among his attending family and friends, on the station platform of a little Southern town. The train booms in which is to carry him, he knows, to "the enchanted promise, the dream made real, the magic come to life" of the Northern university.

"And as that overwhelming knowledge came to him, a song of triumph, joy and victory, so savage and unutterable that he could no longer hold it in his heart, was torn from his lips in a bestial cry of fury, pain and ecstasy. He struck his arms out in the shining air for loss, for agony, for joy. The whole earth reeled about him in a kaleidoscopic blur of shining rail, massed heavy greens, and white empetalled faces of the staring people."

With such raw-nerved intensity of feeling, such integrity to the very core of emotion gained from common incidents, such grand, violent, sensuous, and sonorous poetry, Thomas Wolfe narrates five years in a young man's life. "Of Time and the River" (Scribner, $3) must stand, I'm convinced, as one of the two or three most impressive and beautiful American novels of our time.

* * * *

SINCE 1929, when he gave us "Look Homeward, Angel," Mr. Wolfe has been silent to the public's waiting ear, save for a very few Scribners and American Mercury stories. But, with the frenzy and fury which he makes so clear in his autobiographical hero, he wrote 2,000,000 words—now condensed to rather less than a quarter of that bulk in these 912 pages. They carry forward the story of that same Eugene Gant of the first novel, the young, lonely, agonizingly sensitive and life-hungry lad from the State of "Catawba"—the region around Asheville, N. C.

The sequence is simple. Graduated from the State university at 19, he goes off to Harvard. An M. A. there—a trip home to the deathbed of his father — and he takes up teaching at Columbia. After a year there he sails for England, stays in Oxford a while, then moves on to Paris. He roams over France, and boards a ship for home.

But on that frame Mr. Wolfe hangs several things. For one, an immense wealth of characters—ripe, Dickensian old Uncle Bascom in Barton; Francis Starwick, Middle-Western student grown dilettante; rare old Miss Potter, who runs a celebrity soiree in Cambridge; Abe, gray-faced young Jewish student at Columbia; Robert Weaver, Southern wastrel; the motherly little countess who befriends Eugene in Orleans—dozens and dozens more than I can mention, all caught to the life with preternatural skill and understanding.

Then there are the hugely live and vigorous dramatic scenes, gustily comic—as Starwick's intended duel; or deeply tragic—as the Gant house during the old stone-carver's death; or overlaid with both—as the shrill outburst of the pathetic little would-be genius, Ten Eyck, at Miss Potter's table.

* * * *

MORE important, more central to the book, is the heart-deep nostalgia for "the grand and casual landscape of America," which Mr. Wolfe reveals in Eugene. As tender, far-reaching and all-loving as Whitman is this side of the youth — toward the "man-swarm" of the cities, toward the sound of a movie projector's shutter at night in the little square of a Southern town, toward the lone whistle of a train across the countryside, toward "the memory of that lost America—the America of 20 years ago, of quiet streets, the time-enchanted spell and magic of full June, the solid, lonely, liquid shuffle of men in shirt-sleeves coming home, the leafy fragrance of the cooling turnip-greens, and screens that slammed, and sudden silence."

Of all these dear, familiar symbols, Mr. Wolfe is a superb poet. "And in the night time, in the dark there, in all the sleeping silence of the earth, have we not heard the river, the rich, immortal river, full of its strange dark time?"

* * * *

BUT, above all, "Of Time and the River" is, as the sub-title tells, "A Legend of Man's Hunger in His Youth." Eugene is driven "by a hunger so literal, cruel and physical that it wanted to devour the earth and all things and people in it, and when it failed in this attempt, his spirit would drown in an ocean of horror and desolation."

It is a fury "to have the old unquiet mind, the famished heart, the restless soul; it is to lose hope, heart, and all joy utterly, and then to have them wake again, to have the old feeling return with overwhelming force that he is about to find the thing for which his life obscurely and desperately is groping—for which all men on this earth have sought—one face out of the million faces, a wall, a door, a place of certitude and peace, and wandering no more."

And so charged and so directed, however quivering and demonic and even hysterical he may seem, Eugene is the image of all youth. What he feels and expresses with such naked violence in these pages every young heart has felt—and smothered, and betrayed, and all but lost.

* * * *

"OF TIME AND THE RIVER" is a greater novel than "Look Homeward, Angel." The realistic passages have become more patient and coherent, the rhapsodic passages have gained a deeper swell of organ music. Not one writer in America now exceeds Mr. Wolfe in his tremenduos grasp and power.

And if what I have been saying may seem extreme to you, I beg you to look for yourself. Take it, read it, and live with it. It isn't a book—it's the whole hunger and torment and ecstasy, the whole memory and feeling and love, of life.

America's Best

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

MISS EVELYN F. HARRIS, of South Orange, N. J., commenting on my statement that "of all the great British novelists . . . the two most popular are Charles Dickens and Jane Austen," asks me to state "the two most consistently popular American novelists—those who have been and will in all probability continue to be read by an admiring public?"

The two are Nathaniel Hawthorne and Mark Twain.

* * * *

I regard "The Scarlet Letter" as the greatest work of literary art ever written in the Western Hemisphere. The famous novelist, George Moore, told me that "The House of the Seven Gables" was an immortal masterpiece. Furthermore, Hawthorne wrote many short stories that will never be forgotten. And if one reads his Notebooks, one will discover how very little Hawthorne used of the material that kept rising in his mind. If he had lived 500 years he could not have exhausted the subject-matter for plots of stories that he jotted down whenever he thought of it. "The Scarlet Letter" is the perfect example of what a novel should be, in construction, characterization and literary style.

* * * *

Mark Twain, as different in temperament and manner of writing from Hawthorne as could well be imagined, ranks with him as the author of truly great novels—"Huckleberry Finn," "Tom Sawyer," "Pudd'nhead Wilson," while his historical romance about Joan of Arc, and his story, "The Prince and the Pauper," will always have readers.

"Huckleberry Finn" is one of the great books of the world—it has never been so popular in translations as the stories of Fenimore Cooper, but in all English-speaking countries it holds first place among American novels.

New Deal Price Aims Need To Be Clarified

Roosevelt's Failure To Rationalize Purposes Causes Needless Confusion.

By Elliott Thurston.

ONCE again President Roosevelt's all too casual remarks at a press conference, to the effect that he thinks the price level still too low, have produced an inflationary flurry in the markets which had to be punctured by a clarifying statement from the White House.

However much the press may be to blame for misinterpreting his replies to their questions, the fact remains that Mr. Roosevelt himself is mainly responsible for confusions which repeatedly arise. The fault is partly with the present press conference system, under which Mr. Roosevelt, unlike any of his predecessors since Woodrow Wilson, permits oral questions. But it would be too bad to go back to the system of written questions. It is of great advantage to the press and hence, theoretically, to the public at large to have the President willing to talk freely with the press, as Mr. Roosevelt has done all along.

Nevertheless, the dangers need to be fully recognized and their avoidance is primarily up to the President. In dealing with subjects as sensitive as monetary and price policy, Mr. Roosevelt needs to be not so much cautious as clear. He has often been, instead, casual and far from clear. In reply to a question day before yesterday as to whether he thought prices had risen enough to be stabilized, he answered in the negative. He was then asked if this implied further devaluation of the dollar. In characteristic gesture, Mr. Roosevelt threw up his hands and shook his head.

* * * *

NOW it would take a mind-reader to know precisely what Mr. Roosevelt did mean. Within a few minutes stock tickers were recording an inflationary fillip. The upshot was that the White House issued the following:

"Any inference that has been or may be printed that there is any contemplation of devaluing the dollar is, of course, not true insofar as anything the President said at his press conference * * * is concerned and is made out of whole cloth. Nothing the President said bore the slightest suggestion of anything of that sort."

This, it will be noted, only denies further devaluation. It still leaves intact the President's statement that he thinks prices should go higher. It may be that the press, or so much of it as assumed that if prices need to go higher further devaluation is to be expected, had no warrant for jumping to that conclusion. Nevertheless it is not an illogical assumption especially to be drawn from an Administration which did, in fact, devalue the dollar in gold almost daily for many weeks until it was down to 59.06 per cent of its old parity. Rather, Mr. Roosevelt has never made clear that he was through with monetary manipulation. He still has authority to devalue down to 50 per cent. It has been deduced that he was disillusioned about monetary manipulation, but there has been no clearing up of that question. Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt has often consulted with the monetary extremists, and only a short time before the press conference he talked with Prof. Fisher of Yale, who echoes Committee for the Nation demands for further devaluation.

THUS it is not altogether fair to say that the devaluation inference was made out of whole cloth. This is not the first time this very thing has happened. Just before Christmas, the markets were worked up to a lather over a sequence of similar events which seemed to spell more devaluation. At that time Mr. Roosevelt likewise remarked that prices were not high enough. Coincidentally Senator Bulkley, of Ohio, all too carelessly, after seeing the President on a patronage matter, hazarded a guess that there might be further devaluation. And Prof. Warren, apostle of gold manipulation, had lunched with the President. Then as now the White House had to explain away the devaluation inferences.

The subject of prices is crucial. It is hard to see why Mr. Roosevelt, already forewarned, does not take more pains to explain at the outset what he means, unless indeed he himself is not sure. The inferences from what he said about wanting higher prices are altogether disturbing even with the devaluation inference left out. For if we are to revert to the obsession with some preexisting price level, theoretically affording justice between debtors and creditors, then business can not hope for that degree of stability which is now essential to revival.

Tempting though the abstraction may be, especially in the political world, that the 1926 price level, for instance, represents theoretical justice between debtors and creditors, it has been conclusively proved that a far greater and more realistic justice is to get business going and to give jobs to millions of unemployed who need and want to earn wages that will buy food, clothing and shelter at prices that, if anything, are lower rather than higher.

* * * *

AS long as the New Deal is bent on attaining some theoretical price level, the very maladjustments which it was supposed Mr. Roosevelt sought to eliminate, the whole disequilibrium in costs, prices and wages, the disparities between agriculture and industry, will merely be pushed ahead to the new price level and business will remain confused and confounded meanwhile.

It hardly needs to be said that this vital subject ought to be treated explicitly and with the utmost clarity.

As Prof. L. D. Edie has said of the gold manipulations, "It was the rationalization of the operations which disturbed confidence. The rationalization was in terms of extremist theories of the commodity dollar type, theories which struck the financial world as somewhat fanatical and belonging to the lunatic fringe of monetary thought."

Rationalization is what is needed above all now, not only to avoid the recurrent misinterpretations but to clear up confusions that have a deadly effect on business confidence.

Celanese Earnings Total $3,229,458

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 7.—The financial statement of the Celanese Corporation of America, which operates the largest industry in Western Maryland, at Amcelle, near here, employing 8,700 operatives, gives net earnings for 1934 as $3,229,458, compared with $5,453,902 income in 1933.

The net income is reached after depreciation, Federal tax provision, reserve for contingencies, expenses and other deductions.

While the company did not do so well last year as in 1933, it has continued to expand. It has been spending huge sums in new buildings and equipment. The disturbed conditions in the textile trade last year are held responsible for the decline in profit.

During 1934 the corporation paid out in preferred dividends $2,566,674 in two issues, including dividends in arrears, which was the only charge against the surplus account.

Memory Fails Murder Juror; Case a Mistrial

Lapse Noted as Panel Files Out After Prosecution of Colored Woman.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday directed a mistrial in the case of Dorothy Jackson, colored, when a juror, S. Merton Chipley, 48 years old, of 305 Massachusetts avenue northeast, developed a lack of memory in connection with the evidence in the case.

Chipley's aberration was noted when the other jurors filed out of court to consider the case. Assistant Clerk Richard Kirkland noticed him still sitting in the jury box and asked him why he had not walked out with the others.

He received no response. Justice Adkins, who had left the bench, was notified, and after talking to Chipley called the jurors back. He then notified the defendant that she could stand on her rights and demand a full panel, and when she, through Attorney Octave Bigioness, suggested that she wished a 12-person jury, a mistrial was directed.

"Apparently his mind is blank on the subject of this trial," Justice Adkins said. "He should be excused from jury duty."

After receiving information from the United States attorney's office that two murder trials were scheduled for next week, Justice Adkins directed that Chipley be left on the panel, with the observation that he could be excused. In the District, murder trial attorneys are by law directed to have in their hands several days prior to trial a list of the complete panel. Should Chipley have been excused, the trial would have been postponed.

The defendant was charged with stabbing to death Alfred Taylor, also colored.

15-Month-Old Boy Seriously Burned

Sister, Accidentally Starts Fire in Home.

Serious burns were suffered early yesterday by 15-month-old Kenneth Clanton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Clanton, of the 1500 block of Gales street northeast, after discarded clothing in an adjoining room ignited and set fire to his crib.

Police learned the baby's sister, Shirley, 4, accidentally started the fire while the parents were away, each believing the other at home.

'The Best Dog Is'—the English Setter

Constant and Gentle Companionship of Deuce and Rex Brightens the Days of Mrs. Karrick in Her Semi-Invalidism.

To most people, the woods and setters are almost synonymous terms. In the case of Mrs. James L. Karrick, of 2120 Bancroft place, the setter stands for constant and gentle companionship in her second-floor living room, where, during the past two years of semi-invalidism, she has spent most of her time.

Deuce and Rex, two large, beautifully marked setters, are always with her—one of them usually stretched at her feet while the other guards the door. So much have they been with her in the last few years that these dogs seem to understand her every wish. If they dream of the wide open spaces of the Stockbridge (Mass.) farm, where they spend their summers, or if Deuce, once broken to the gun, hankers after the hunt, it is not shown by any action of theirs. They live the cloistered life of their mistress so contentedly that these two setters bring to mind that quotation of Maeterlinck's:

"Of all the animal kingdom the dog alone has really broken down the barriers standing between him and mankind. Amid all forms of animal life that surround us, not one, excepting the dog, has made an alliance with us."

"I have always had dogs," Mrs. Karrick stated. "The thing I like best about the English setter is his disposition. I have had a great many setters in my life and I have never known one to be other than gentle and kind. I had setters when my children ere babies and the dogs were so careful of them, never seeming to forget, no matter what the children did, that they were just babies.

"Deuce, the young dog, was trained for hunting," she continued. It turned out that Deuce, the so-called young dog, is 9 years old, while Rex is a mere 12 years. "I hate to talk about the intelligence of my dogs, for I know that everyone thinks his own pets are the smartest. These dogs are just a part of the family, fitting right into the routine. They know when it is time for the chauffeur to come for them to go for a ride and a run. They always take their runs in the vacant field back of the Shoreham. If we drive by and do not stop, they both stand up, look at me, then look at the chauffeur, as if to say 'What's the matter with you people today?' Finally, they reach up and put a paw on the chauffeur's arm, practically commanding him to stop and let them exercise. They sleep on the third floor. When I say to them, 'You go to bed now,' they both get up, go out of the room and upstairs immediately."

Garnett Probes Munitions Data Perjury Angles

Acts as Delayed Transcript of Hearing Testimony Reaches Office.

The belated arrival in the office of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett of the transcript of testimony taken before the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday started an investigation to determine whether witnesses before the committee had committed perjury.

The testimony, completed several weeks ago, was reported to have been sent to Garnett two weeks ago. Because of the delay, it was understood, a letter was dispatched to the committee, asking when the records would be sent.

The papers reached Garnett's office yesterday and he immediately assigned J. Edward Burroughs, an assistant, to study them with a view to making recommendations on what they contained of a criminal nature.

Pending Burroughs' report nothing will be done. Committee members expressed belief some of the witnesses had been "careless" of the truth in a matter about which they could not have been mistaken honestly.

Policeman Acts As an Attorney In Libel Action

Becomes Defense Counsel for Veteran Accused in Police Court.

A policeman attached to the headqarters Crime Prevention Bureau startled Police Court yesterday when he appeared as defense counsel for a prisoner charged with criminal libel against three members of Congress.

Thomas Timothy Connolly, 46, a World War veteran, of Arlington, Mass., was arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt, accused of displaying signs on his automobile denouncing two Senators and a woman Representative. His attorney was absent from court. Detective W. T. Murphy stepped forward and asked permission to represent the defendant both "as a policeman and a member of the District bar."

Judge Hitt granted the request. Murphy waived a preliminary hearing and pleaded for his client's release under a low bond pending grand jury action. The court, however, termed Connolly's offense "willful slander," and fixed bail at $2,000. Murphy said he knew Connolly's family, and made a futile attempt to have bond reduced to $500.

Connolly was arrested Tuesday after a Traffic Bureau policeman had dispersed a crowd around his automobile parked near Seventh and H streets northwest. Signs on the car denounced alleged "crooked" activities of the Massachusetts congressional delegation. The signs were confiscated and Connolly was charged with criminal libel.

The prisoner said he was formerly employed at the Boston Navy Yard and had traveled throughout several Eastern States displaying his placards.

Handiboe Given Chief Clerkship

William N. Handiboe, employe of the District government for 31 years, yesterday was appointed chief clerk of the engineer department.

Since the promotion of Roland M. Brennan from that office to the position of secretary of the board, Handiboe has been acting chief clerk. He will take the oath of office today.

Handiboe is a native of Washington and was educated in the District schools. In 1904 he entered the District service in the surface division, now the highway department. He was made assistant clerk of the engineer department in 1918. He lives at 517 Eighth street northeast.

Virginian Must Pay $1 Fine For Killing of CCC Camper

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 7.—A fine of $1 and costs was imposed today by a corporation court jury upon Paul Noblett, 27-year-old local grocery clerk, for the killing of John Sinclair, member of the Bloody Angle CCC Camp and former Washington resident.

Noblett had been indicted on a technical charge of murder by a special grand jury, but the corporation court jury found him guilty of simple assault.

Immediately after the announcement of the Noblett decision Commonwealth's Attorney W. B. F. Cole stated he would nolle prosse the assault charge pending against William Calhoun, jr., Noblett's companion in the January 20 attack which cost the life of Sinclair, a World War veteran.

Noblett told the jury that he hit Sinclair after the latter had accosted and molested his fiancee, Miss Gladys Calhoun, 22, a sister of William Calhoun. He asserted he acted in self-defense.

Miss Calhoun testified Sinclair grabbed her and attempted to force her into an automobile driven by Leonard H. McGhee, 44, another CCC camper, as she was crossing the street the night of January 20.

Commonwealth's Attorney Cole told the jury before retiring that he did not think the State had proved murder in the first degree and therefore would not request such a verdict.

The jury was out 50 minutes and as its decision was read by the foreman spectators in the crowded courtroom cheered.

DODGE ECONOMY BRINGS ORDER FROM SOUTH POLE

Byrd Expedition Operator Intercepts Broadcast . . . Sends World's Longest-Distance Order 9,000 Miles To Detroit

EVERYWHERE motorists are switching to the economy of the big, powerful, New-Value Dodge. But imagine the surprise when this radio message, from far-off Little America, reached the Dodge factory, from Radio Operator Clay Bailey, aboard Admiral Byrd's flagship. Mr. Bailey wirelessed:

"Picked up radio description last night of new Dodge that does twenty and more miles per gallon of gas. You can place my order now. Please have Coupe awaiting me Boston on our return to States. You can take in and sell my old Dodge now. It was a darned good car. After months of roughing it in this sea and ice that new 'Airglide Ride' will certainly feel swell. Dodge has always been the finest riding and driving and most economical car I have ever driven—and I've handled 'em all." (Signed) Clay Bailey, Radioman U. S. N.

Right back flashed the Dodge answer to the returning explorer: "Will have new Dodge awaiting you."

Throughout big America, too, the sales response to this new Dodge is the most sensational in history. Never before has any car, so low-priced, given such clear-cut supremacy in dollar-for-dollar value. And remember, with all its 93 basic advancements, the big, New-Value Dodge delivers for just a few dollars more than lowest-priced cars.

Heiress' Death Still a Mystery As Probe Ends

the former Betty Hanna, a granddaughter of the late Mark Hanna.

Mrs. Davidson's body was found a week ago yesterday in the garage of her home, crumpled in a kneeling position, the head and arms lying on the floor of her automobile, the knees on the running board.

The discovery was made by a colored butler, Emanuel Birch, shortly after 9 a. m.

In bringing in their verdict the jury flouted the last-minute assertion of Herbert Vail, summoned by attorneys for the Davidson family, who electrified the courtroom with a previously unhinted assertion that the Statler heiress threatened suicide on the night of February 6.

Vail in his earlier testimony had told the jury that he had known the bride as a moody young woman, subject to periods of deep depression. Today he stoutly declared that he considered her mentally unbalanced.

Tells of Suicide Threat.

The suicide threat, he said, was made when he and his wife, the dead woman's confidant and friend, visited the Davidson home as dinner guests.

"Mrs. Davidson was charming and gracious when we came in," he said, "everything was all right until our dinner had been practically served. Then she became depressed and moody and abruptly left the table. My wife followed and they went into the living room. Davidson and I remained at the dining room table and had our coffee. When we joined them, Mrs. Davidson appeared to have become herself again after a talk with Mrs. Vail.

"When we reached the living room Mrs. Vail went to the piano in the hall and played several numbers. We drifted out and joined her, and presently she suggested that Mrs. Davidson play for us. She consented and seated herself at the piano.

"Seemed Discouraged."

"But something seemed wrong, she didn't finish anything that she started to play. She seemed to grow discouraged and presently she was in the same mood she had been in the dining room, and left the piano to go back into the living room. She was crying.

"Mrs. Vail and Davidson stayed by the piano, but I followed Mrs. Davidson and sat down beside her trying to comfort her. She continued to cry and seemed very despondent. She shocked me when she suddenly said to me, 'I think it the best thing you can do is go out in the garage and turn on the motor.'"

The only person to whom Vail confided the scene, he said, was his wife, but it so impressed him that he exclaimed, "I knew she was going to do that," when he heard of her death.

"Was she in the same mood that night that you observed on the morning of her death at Montesanti's spaghetti camp?" he was asked.

"Practically," Vail replied.

Admits Concealing Story.

Under cross-examination by J. M. Broughton, attorney for the Statler interests, Vail admitted he had concealed the story of the suicide in previous talks with officials.

"You are testifying to it now because the evidence here shows that her death could not have been accidental, aren't you?" Broughton demanded.

"Yes," Vail answered in a low voice.

"An accident would have been the easiest way," Vail added. "There was no reason I didn't tell this before except that I hoped it would be found to be an accident."

Asked if he thought the Statler heiress had been mentally unbalanced between the night of the dinner party and the time of her death, Vail said:

"I think she has been mentally unbalanced ever since I have known her."

Society Attends.

The very cream of the exclusive social set which winters here crowded into the Community Hall. From their own ranks, the Davidson attorneys summoned the final witnesses.

Vail was preceded to the witness stand by Dr. C. C. Carpenter, professor of pathology at Wake Forest College.

Dr. Carpenter, who performed the autopsy and made the chemical analysis which fixed carbon monoxide poisoning as the cause of death, denied that Mrs. Davidson could have placed herself in the position in which her body was found.

The bruises were fresh, he said, received within 48 hours, and could have been caused by a human hand.

But none of them, he said, could possibly be connected with the immediate cause of death. That was clearly carbon monoxide poisoning. The reddish tint which suffused the body and the condition of the blood, he said, established it. No trace of any other poison was revealed by the analysis of the vital organs. The amount of alcohol disclosed was far below the point when intoxication exists, he said.

Dr. Carpenter was the first witness this morning. He said he had been professor of pathology at Wake Forest College for nine years and had performed 1,000 autopsies.

Attorney Broughton took over the questioning.

Q.—At the first hearing you testified that your diagnosis of death was carbon monoxide poisoning. Has your subsequent research confirmed that opinion. A.—It has. There was no trace of any other poison.

Q.—In that garage with the motor running, how long would it require to bring about death. A.—My answer to that can be only relative. I should think death would have taken place within half an hour.

Question of Position.

Q.—Could a person becoming unconscious in the driver's seat have fallen into the position in which Mrs. Davidson was found. A.—No.

Q.—Could a person walking outside the car have fallen into that position. A.—No.

Q.—If Mrs. Davidson had voluntarily assumed that position could she have retained it as unconsciousness crept upon her.

A.—In my opinion; no.

Q.—Was there any alcohol shown by your analysis. A.—Yes, the percentage shown was two-tenths.

Q.—Did you examine the body for bruises. A.—I did. On the outer surface of the middle section of the left arm there was a slightly raised area with a pin point perforation in the middle that had the appearance in my judgment of having been caused by a pinch with a solid object.

Q.—Could that have been caused by a human hand. A.—Possibly.

Q.—If Mrs. Davidson had voluntarily knelt on the running board and remained so until death, was there anything which could have caused these bruises. A.—Not in my opinion.

Q.—Was there any mark on the head or face. A.—No.

Mark on Body.

Q.—If she had fallen into the position described, would it not have produced some mark?

A.—In my opinion it would have. I found none.

Mrs. Herbert Vail was the first of Mrs. Davidson's intimate friends called to the stand.

Q. You knew Mrs. Davidson very well. A. Yes, I met her a year ago here.

Q. Was she temperamental?—A. Yes, she was very temperamental. She was moody and depressed for no reason I could see.

Q. Can you tell us about that in more detail?—A. Well, last fall when she was visiting me I saw two of her moods in one day. The first time was at the luncheon table with Mrs. Richard Tufts and me and again that afternoon. In the afternoon she had a visitor. He was reading a newspaper and suddenly she arose and ran out of the house and go in her car. She drove away. She came back 20 minutes later. I thought at the time that the mood was caused because no one was paying specific attention to her at the time.

Asks of Fainting Spells.

Q. Did she have fainting spells?—A. She told me that she had them frequently. I never saw one, but I believe Mrs. Tufts, my sister-in-law, did.

Q. Was she a woman who craved and demanded special attention?—A. She was moody when she didn't get it.

Q. Did you ever hear her say no one loved her?—A. Many times.

Mrs. Richard Tufts took the stand.

She described Mrs. Davidson as "up and down—awfully happy one minute, and the next all the way down for no reason at all."

"I've been in her home almost every day since her marriage," Mrs. Tufts continued. "Mr. Davidson was marvelous to his wife. He simply couldn't have been sweeter."

Assurance of amity in the honeymoon cottage also came from Mrs. Alford.

Mrs. Alford Questioned.

Broughton cross-examined Mrs. Alford at some length.

"You've been at the Davidson home since Mrs. Davidson's death and while this inquest has been going on for a cocktail party?" he demanded.

"Not what I'd call a cocktail party," she countered. "Highballs were served. That is a universal custom in Pinehurst homes."

"While an investigation is being carried on of a death in the family?" Broughton asked.

"Yes. I've known doctors to prescribe them," she said.

Waste on Relief Jobs Charged To Government

Winchester City Manager, in Letter to Byrd, Scores Handling of Work.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 7.—City Manager Arthur M. Field today made public a letter to Senator H. F. Byrd, in which he assailed the relief administration for an alleged lack of efficiency "and the cost of red tape and administration."

Commending Senator Byrd for his stand in the Senate on relief appropriations, Field declared: "I believe this community is able to and always has taken care of its unemployable poor and can do so much better and cheaper than the Federal Government can."

"From my observation of the actual work of the relief administration in this locality," he wrote, "and, of course, it is the same method used all over the country, the lack of efficiency, the cost of red tape and administration is ruinously high. When the public finally becomes conscious of the tremendous cost of this waste, it will make the Teapot Dome matter seem pale by comparison.

"We have just received a copy of a new ruling for handling labor on work relief. By the time the various forms are filled out by our foremen and workmen and the corrections made each day, it will be 5 o'clock and time to quit."

Asserting he believed the Government can stimulate general business and construction by providing a percentage of the funds for some types of public works, Field concluded with the statement that "instead of complicating such works projects with the red tape of PWA or FERA, which is expensive, the Government need only require that such projects be designed and the construction supervised by recognized and registered architects or engineers," and that certified accountants check expenditures and make regular reports.

Taxes in Bethesda Urged for Library

Bill in Assembly Referred to County Delegation.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 7.—A bill to direct the Montgomery county commissioners to levy a tax for the construction and support of the Newcomb Library Corporation in Bethesda was introduced in the House today.

A tax of 2 cents on $100 of assessable property in the Bethesda election district would be levied for three years. After that period, the county board would be directed to lay a 1½-cent tax on property in the district for the maintenance of the library.

The measure, introduced by Delegate Ruth E. Shoemaker (Democrat), Montgomery, was referred to the county delegation.

Worker Drowned Near Dam in W. Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grafton, W. Va., March 7.—When he stepped backward to avoid a truck, Charles W. Leary, 35, a carpenter's helper, fell into swollen waters of the Tygarts Valley River at the $12,000,000 flood-control dam here early today and was drowned. His death was the first fatality at the project.

Leary, a native of Richmond, Va., was an employe of the dam contractor and was working with a night crew under flood lights when the accident occurred.

Modern Buses To Take Place Of Trolley Line

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 7.—Within approximately five weeks Charlottesville will have modern urban motor buses running its streets in place of a one-way trolley line, Virginia Public Service officials said today. An order for the new vehicles will be placed within the next week and that they are to be delivered within a month.

For the same 5-cent fare that the city has been paying on antiquated trolleys it will get service over the same routes now used, plus possible other routes to be extended in the future.

As soon as the buses are put into operation work will be begun to take up the trolley lines and improve the streets in which they lie. This work, for which $28,000 has been alloted by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads through the Virginia State Highway Department, will give work to approximately 40 men for three months.

It is planned to repave the entire length of Main street in a wide strip down the center, and the Fry's Spring road will be transformed into a two-lane parkway. Each lane will conduct traffic one way, with a park between the two lanes.

It is planned eventually to plant this park with trees.

Bell Sentenced To 3-Year Term In Poison Case

'No Defense' Court Trial Is Quickly Ended; He Goes to Jail March 15.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 7.—An hour was sufficient today to retry Deacon Edward C. Bell, convict him and send him to the penitentiary for three years for attempting to poison his wife.

The 60-year-old church leader, haggard, ill and aged many years in appearance since his first trial and subsequent sojourn in Marion State Hospital, pleaded not guilty, but offered no defense and asked for a trial by court instead of by jury. After a rapid summary of the State's testimony the court found him guilty and pronounced sentence.

The minimum sentence of three years was imposed after Prosecutor Albert V. Bryan recommended it in view of the defendant's age and psysical condition.

Reaction of Bell.

Bell's own reaction was:

"I'd rather go to prison than back to that asylum."

The deacon heard the sentence with an almost numb composure, like a man so worn out that he lacked even the emotional stimulus of an active despair. His eyes filled with slow tears, but he seemed too hopeless even to blink them back. When reporters asked him to comment he simply shook his head.

Actual commitment was deferred until March 15 to give him time to wind up business affairs. He was released under bond of $10,000 and went immediately to the home of his brother, William A. Bell, to rest. There he sat alone in a darkened room, hopelessly brooding over his fortunes and declining to talk even to members of his family.

The "no defense" plea, it was understood, was entered because Bell wished to throw himself on the mercy of the court, yet could not consider a guilty plea. His first trial had ended in a jury disagreement, with five jurors holding him not guilty because of insanity. Since then he has passed two months in the Marion asylum under observation, and two weeks ago State alienists declared him sane. His counsel felt, apparently, that there was no defense left.

Health Is Failing.

Also, Bell is not the man he was in the first trial. He lost 22 pounds, he says, in the asylum, and this he attributes to "terrible" conditions there. A stroke he suffered two years ago still leaves part of his right side paralyzed, and he has developed Bright's disease, according to a report from Dr. G. A. Wright, superintendent of the Marion institution, to J. W. Adams, court clerk. Dr. Wright said that "his health obviously is declining."

Bell complained bitterly of the food at Marion.

"All we had there for dinner," he said to his attorneys, "was cornbread and molasses and coffee with no cream or sugar. It was terrible. I'd rather go to jail than back there."

Mrs. Bell Improving.

In passing sentence, Judge Frederick W. Coleman took into consideration testimony that the health of Mrs. Bell was improving and that there was a good prospect of her ultimate complete recovery from the effects of poison Bell is accused of having given her in food and medicine. In that first trial the State maintained that he had given her the poisons in small doses over a course of months, and produced evidence tracing the purchase of poisons to him.

The State also presented evidence linking the deacon to Mrs. Mary Ella McMullin, of Richmond, who testified she had received costly gifts from him. It was the State's contention that he attempted to rid himself of his wife by poison because of his love for Mrs. McMullin.

May Serve 15 Months.

Bell's lawyers estimate he will have to serve approximately 15 months of the sentence unless he receives executive clemency. Good behavior, they explain, will cut his time in half, and the period of his stay at Marion will count on the prison term. As yet there is no definite plan to petition the Governor for a pardon, and his attorneys refused to say whether such a plan was being considered.

The emaciated churchman and wealthy business man left the courtroom leaning heavily upon the arm of his brother, shrinking from a cameraman. At his brother's home he refused to see reporters, but Mrs. W. A. Bell, his gray-haired and amiable sister-in-law, confirmed reports that he was too ill and too weak to fight further.

"Why, he's lost so much weight in that asylum that he's not the same man," she said. "He can't see anyone else. He can't even talk about it. You can realize what a terrible strain he's been under.

"Want to Forget It."

"In fact, it has been an awful trial to the whole family and a great misfortune. We are not criminals. We are respectable people. And Eddie is not a criminal. All we want to do now is forget it, if we can.

"Eddie has several pieces of business to clear up before he goes—there. He doesn't know what he'll do after the next few days. He says he'd like to go now, and get it over with. I guess he's too worn to care any more."

The deacon's wife was not in court. Nor would she see visitors. In the first trial she stood by him stoutly for a while, refusing to believe he would do "a thing like that." Since then she had not seen him until a few days ago, when she is reported to have taken an automobile ride with him.

Gossipers Couldn't Tell This Woman How To LOSE FAT

She Made Up Her Own Mind —Note The Results.

"I started taking Kruschen 3 months ago. They are wonderful. I have reduced 15 lbs. I now weigh nearly 130 and am getting nearer my average weight. I had been bothered with hives and gastric pains which now are gone." Mrs. Naomi McKay, Lake Stevens, Mich.

There's a million women—yes, and men too—who could have lost 15 pounds of fat—fat that drags them down and tires them out—and makes life a burden.

They could have lost it just as easily as Mrs. McKay did and probably quicker, but someone who loves to gossip told them that losing fat the healthy way was dangerous—so they keep lugging it around—and the gossipers who told them to beware are laughing at them.

To fat men and women who have a mind of their own this may interest you—if you don't lose at least 12 pounds of fat with one jar of Kruschen Salts and feel better than you did a month ago—money back—it's the little daily dose that does it—one-half teaspoonful in a cup of hot water every morning before breakfast—it tastes better when you add the juice of half a lemon. Mayfair Cafe, New Gay Spot, Opens Monday

Background Is Product of Ziegfeld Follies Scenic Artists.

By Kay Ware.

Another new spot—this time it's the Mayfair Restaurant, subtitled the "Cafe of All Nations." It opens Monday in the new Remington Rand Building at Thirteenth and F streets.

When a restaurant is decorated by the artists who made the scenic effects for the Ziegfeld Follies, you'll know decoration will be out of the ordinary. And you'll be right, since Joseph Urban Associates, particularly Lillian Roland, laid murals of nationalistic life and maps of the countries all over the Mayfair walls.

For instance, take the map of France. The Arc de Triomphe rises out of the spot that should be marked "Paris," a cavalier dances the minuet where Versailles should be. There's the vineyards on the west coast near Bordeaux, and shepherds and sheep in the Basque region. That gives you an idea of the manners and customs—as well as historic reminders—appearing for all the nations.

And just listen to the furnishings! Benches along three walls are covered in turquoise fabricoid, chairs are treated in the same manner, with white woodwork. Tables have black tops and chromium pedestals. Alcoves, separating this arrangement, take care of parties of six or eight and are walled with sheets of black glass reaching from the tops of the benches to the ceiling. The ceiling is acoustically treated and the entire set-up is air-conditioned.

From the main room you go into the bar. Here the walls are covered with panoramas of Washington, the Potomac, the Capitol and the White House. If you look closer you catch a glimpse of Richmond and Baltimore and the States of Maryland and Virginia.

John F. McGregor, formerly manager of the Broadmoor, is in charge. Charles Garbett, formerly of the University Club, and H. Homberger, formerly at the Carlton Hotel, are chefs. Cocktails served from 2 to 4:30 and 10 p. m. to 2 a. m. Entertainment during both periods. Luncheons and dinners are served from 11 a. m. on.

Don't the Dorseys ever sleep? They've covered nearly every night spot in town, reminisced with every host. Speaking of hosts, the best of the week were Sidney and Morris Kafka, chatting about music and bands, good and bad, with Jimmy Dorsey and Bob Crosby the other afternoon at the Mayflower.

The same evening Morris was dancing on Heigh-Ho's floor—a very smooth dancer. Looking into dim corners—there were the Dorseys again—plus Sidney. Don't see how those folks manage it—but they squeezed in many a trip to the Club Habana and the Cotton Club as well.

Marty Rubin has a sheet of note paper somewhere in his pockets. It's not a love letter, but a very clever lyric to "Night and Day," composed by Virginia Hustvedt, the young woman who walked off with "Fare Thee Well, Annabelle," parody honors. While at Heigh-Ho Tuesday night she pulled the "Tight and Gay" bit out of her white evening purse—explained, "I've written parodies to—oh, just lots of songs."

This "Tight and Gay" one is a honey. Marty ought to have it memorized by this time, so ask him to sing it. And while you're at it, ask for Miss Hustvedt's "Fare Thee Well" one, too.

The Di Gitanos are held over another week. The rest of the line-up starting Monday is not yet known. Rumored there'll be a magician.

Hi-Hat's song contest is in its third week—and still going strong. For the first time the winner the other night was one who had a musical background. Mrs. Eugene West's former husband wrote many popular pieces, "Roll On, Mississippi," "You Know You Belong to Somebody Else," "Broadway Rose," and the early one, "Everybody Shimmies Now."

Even before her marriage Mrs. West was associated with musical and theatrical doings. She's kept in close touch with musical trends, so guessed "The Isle of Capri" and was right.

(Note: "The Isle of Capri" has been the most popular six nights out of nine at Hi-Hat.)

Perhaps Mrs. West read the winning selection in the stars. She's an astrologer.

Club Troika's importing another entertainer Sunday. Volva Prasenka (we think that's the English spelling) is an expert on Russian and gypsy skits. In addition, he plays the piano, sings and spiels—whatever advance notices may mean.

George, Troika's head waiter, is all fussed up about preparing a birthday party for Helen Szymczak, daughter of the vice governor of the Federal Reserve Board. It has to be just so, from the huge cake with its 18 candles—all to be blown out with one whiff—to the Russian souvenirs. Trust George to get the souvenirs, but can he guarantee candles that will go out at the same time?

Things are going golden over at the Bamboo room. Johnny Slaughter is back from New York with a new piece from "Anything Goes." It's called "Blow, Gabriel, Blow." Then too, Paul Dawson trotted out a gold-plated sax that makes you blink.

And as for golden voices, there's Ernestine's and Fenton's. But perhaps you think they're silver.

Child's Gingham Club presents a new and beautiful sister team, Fern and Lorraine, who are as entertaining as they are easy on the eyes. The Three Stylists warble and hum in New York manner, Mary Miller, tiny little acrobatic dancer, has a smile for everyone. Jimmy Santmeyer and boys add inspiration to your dancing.

The Jockey Club has acquired a new dispenser to mix your favorite cocktail. He has been mixing (without interruption) since

Waynesboro, Pa., March 7.—Two of Waynesboro's blind residents died yesterday.

One was George Walker Shearer, 65, who died suddenly of a heart attack. Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Saturday at his home.

Mr. Shearer, a native of Chambersburg, Pa., formerly lived in Pittsburgh. He resided for the last 33 years in Waynesboro, being employed for 11 years as a painter at Geiser Manufacturing Co. Despite his affliction he was an ardent baseball fan, following the Pittsburgh team through the eyes of his sons and grandsons. He seldom missed a baseball game in Waynesboro.

Surviving are his wife, 10 children and 24 grandchildren.

Cyrus Irvin G. Eyler, 64, a native of Eyler's Valley, near Sabillasville, Md., died at his home here after an illness of a year. He came to Waynesboro from Emmitsburg, Md., 17 years ago. Scott, of Huntington, W. Va.; Mrs. Edward Dwight, of Smyrna, Dela., and Miss Claudia Marshall.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m., in Old Leeds Church, Hume.

Mrs. Scarce's Rites Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., March 7.—The funeral of Mrs. J. H. Scarce, 25, was held near Danville today. She died at Memorial Hospital, where her case had elicited high medical interest.

Last summer Mrs. Scarce was engulfed in a sheet of flame, set off when a tar barrel standing beside the highway caught fire. Practically all of her body was seared and she hovered between life and death, doctors holding out no hope for her. More than a score of people gave skin for the series of grafting operations which were necessary.

At one time she recovered sufficiently to be taken home, but in a few weeks was returned to the hospital, where since October she had steadily declined.

Senate Approves Issue for Virginia Bonds.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., March 7.—The Legislature today approved a bill authorizing the issuance of $2,918,000 in State bonds, to be used to retire Virginia debt bonds now outstanding in a similar amount.

The Senate adopted the House-approved measure by a vote of 25 to 0 after President Hodges moved it be taken up out of its regular order.

"This will save the State approximately $40,000 in interest," he said.

The Virginia debt represents what West Virginia owes to the mother State for funds supplied after the creation of West Virginia, for road building and construction work.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Madrigal

With spring in the air, I went bounding into the highways, for a columnist ever is a chump for spring. At Forty-eighth street and Broadway I met a chorine, a blonde chorine, and stopped to engage her in conversation.

"It looks like spring," I cracked gaily. "Yeah, it'll be Spring 3100 if that guy tries to outsmart me," she snarled. "You don't understand," I said. "Spring 3100 is the telephone number at police headquarters. I'm talking about spring, the leafy tenderness of Nature, the smell of wet earth, the fragrance of magnolia blossoms—you know, the season of spring."

The blonde chorine nodded morosely: "Nuts to spring," she said. "I'm talking about that singer in Joe Blotz' orchestra. You ran a line about him and me romancing. The rat whispers sweet nothings in my pearly pink ear for three weeks . . . then last night he introduces me to his wife . . . he called her the 'Little Woman.' How'd you like that? I'm the laughing stock of the whole dressing room, and if . . ."

I rushed away from her. Spring was in the air. She didn't understand.

* * * *

At Forty-ninth street, a theater manager met me. "It's a swell day," I said, bubbling over. "What's swell about it?" he asked. "Did you see what those dramatic critics did to our show last night?" He pulled the clipping from his pocket. "Look, they give it two stars and an asterisk."

He was moaning in earnest when I left him. Overhead the sky was blue and you could almost hear the robins chirping, but he stood there, his head buried in the black and white epitaphs which distressed him so mightily.

A block away was Noel Coward. Here was a man after my own heart, attuned to the ecstacy of the season. "Noel, old boy," I gurgled, "there is no place like New York in the spring. True enough, the songwriters have told us of 'April in Paris,' but they're clowning. April in New York is the ticket. The smell of wet earth, the shafts of sunlight lighting the brick towers of the skyscrapers, the blades of grass popping out of the ground in Central Park . . . . I'll bet that's why you are spending the spring season right here in town, isn't it?"

Mr. Coward looked at me dourly: "I'm leaving for China on Friday," he said.

* * * *

Probably, I thought to myself, as I walked away, good old Noel had a bad night, or perhaps an acid stomach. That was it, an acid stomach. Many's the time I've had an acid stomach, myself.

At 2 o'clock, I was to meet Claudette Colbert at the Sherry-Netherlands for some pictures. Popping into a taxicab, I engaged in conversation with the driver. "Nice day," I said. "Good weather is lousy for us cabbies," he said truculently. We drove in silence to the hotel.

Brightly, I strode to the house telephones. Miss Colbert was in 12-D. Arriving on the twelfth floor, the photographer met me, with his hand on his lips: "Sh-h," he said, "she's having breakfast." I regarded him stonily: "But the date was for 2 o'clock, and I got up early to keep the date." The photographer nodded: "Yeah, but you know how these people are," he said. "They can't be disturbed until they're good and ready, that's what I've found."

The elevator stopped at the twelfth floor. "Where you going?" asked the photographer. "She'll be through in half an hour and then we can take the pictures. It's just like a spring day." I waved a sour farewell to him: "Tell Miss Colbert," I said, before the elevator doors closed, "that I hope she enjoyed her grapefruit."

"It wasn't grapefruit," yelled the photographer. "She had sliced oranges. I seen her eating them." The elevator doors slammed, and the lift dropped to the main floor. Funny that Claudette should be eating oranges. I always fancied that she was the tangerine type.

* * * *

A bit upset, but still undaunted, I carried on to the tailor. Year after year, I've been wearing ready-to-wear spring topcoats. This season was to be different . . . an actor friend had told me of a tailor who would make a topcoat for the same price that the ready-to-wear stores offered it.

The date was for 2:45. Promptly at 2:30, I presented myself. "Mr. Zilch is out to lunch," said the girl, "but he was expecting you and I know that he will feel very bad that you were forced to wait—even for a minute."

"That's quite all right," I assured this pleasant young lady. "Quite all right. Many's the time I've been late myself. Probably he is taking advantage of this fine spring weather to indulge in a walk along Fifth avenue, you know, a constitutional—don't worry about me. I'll sit right here."

At 2:45 the tailor was still walking, and the pleasant young lady was getting quite upset. And I was beginning to get burned. At 3:05 I rose and left. "But what about your spring overcoat?" asked the pleasant young lady. "It looks like snow," I said curtly. "We will probably have a hailstorm tomorrow."

2 Women Describe Lamson's 'Anguish' On Finding of Body

By the Associated Press.

San Jose, Calif., March 7.—The peculiar cry by which David A. Lamson first revealed the death of his wife, Allene, was the focal point in testimony of two witnesses today in Lamson's second trial for murder.

Mrs. Julia Place, Palo Alto realty agent, with whom the Lamson home had been listed for summer renting, told how she went to the bungalow on the Stanford University campus with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Raas, prospective tenants.

The two women said they went to the front door and rang the bell. There was no reply. Mrs. Place walked around the house, where she found Lamson, stripped to the waist, working in the back yard. He apologized and went into the house that he might put on a shirt and open the front door. Mrs. Place rejoined Mrs. Raas.

"After a few moments we heard a peculiar noise," Mrs. Place said. "Several minutes later Lamson came to the door and said, 'My God, my wife has been murdered!'"

Mrs. Place said she would call the cry "an hysterical one."

"I heard it distinctly through the closed door," she explained. "It was a voice, an hysterical cry, a cry without words."

Mrs. Raas gave similar testimony.

Lillian Palmedo, Protege of Urban, Drew Designs for the Mayfair.

Propped up in bed in a New York hospital, her drawing board laid out across her knees, Lillian Gaertner Palmedo made sketches. She drew designs for mattress tickings—"these in the hospital are so ugly," she said—for fabrics, furniture, clothes. She made imaginative drawings that were put on exhibition in the Anderson Galleries in New York and the Sears, Roebuck Galleries here.

But most important of all her sketches were pencil tracings of maps, period costumes, historical spots—a mingled swift impression of the nations of the world. These sketches were the beginning of the mural that now decorates the walls of Washington's new Mayfair Restaurant, opening Monday.

When she was 14, Lillian Gaertner attracted the notice of Joseph Urban, who suggested she go to Vienna to study. This she did, and on her return, four years later, she painted the mural in the Ziegfeld Theater, the largest in the world, covering an area of 24,000 square feet.

Designed Sets for Opera.

The eyes of the Metropolitan Opera widened a little at this and Miss Gaertner received a commission to design sets and costumes for five operas, among them "Johnny Spielt Auf" and "Electra."

Then she married Harold Bolke Palmedo, cousin of the German war ace, Baron von Richthofen. Fame and fortune came closer; then while tobogganing on a vacation, she broke her leg, was laid up in the hospital. But this confinement failed to stop her creative efforts. She refused to be bored, and so she sketched.

The Mayfair Resaurant mural was painted in Mrs. Palmedo's New York studios from these sketches, measured to fit, then sent here to be put in place. She explains that murals should not be painted directly upon the walls, for the plaster may crack and the paint peel. She has put into this work her youthful vitality—she's 28 now—the bold, bright splashes of color and gayety she loves to create. She hates detail; prefers to work by the yard than by the inch.

Murals Create Vogue.

Aside from an 18-hour day working schedule, Mrs. Palmedo has time to care for a small daughter, Leisel, and raise Austrian boxers. She has 16 of these dogs at her home in New Milford, Conn., and sometimes puts them on exhibition, although, as she says, "they're no champions." However, some of them have sported blue ribbons in their time.

Some of Mrs. Palmedo's murals are in the Maritime Exchange Building, the Hotel Pennsylvania, the Essex House and the Persian room of the Hotel Plaza. This last room created the vogue for the Persian theme in women's fashions. Her designs add beauty to wallpaper, china, glass, the gold fabrics used for evening fashions.

5 articles by GERTRUDE STEIN

Gertrude Stein—a legendary figure who returned to America to re-become a reality, who was a star of William James, a discoverer of Picasso, an inspirer of Sherwood Anderson and an influence on Ernest Hemingway, who manipulated language into forms judged evolutionary by some and nonsensical by others—Gertrude Stein has written a series of five special articles for Post readers. They will appear on five successive Sundays.

If only for their subject matter, these articles will be read . . . and read widely. Miss Stein knows her audiences—whatever her audiences may think of her. She also knows the vitality of her subjects—however clearly (to some) or confusedly (to others) she seems to discuss them.

Her chosen subjects for this Post series will be: (1) American Education and College; (2) American Newspapers; (3) Crime in America; (4) American Government; (5) American Food and Houses.

The first article in Miss Stein's series will appear in The Washington Post next Sunday, March 10th.

City's First Modernistic Home Built

Mrs. Tucker's House Is Unique in District Architecture.

Washington Matron Will Occupy the Dwelling This Month.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Washington's first entirely modernistic house is almost ready for occupancy, and Mrs. McKeldin Tucker and her small son, Robbin, will take possession next week. Mrs. Tucker is staying with Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver at their Georgetown home, and is interestedly watching the finishing work on her new abode at 1509 Twenty-eighth street, Georgetown.

The house, which is being done by Mr. Wolcott C. Waggamann, brother of Mrs. Pulver, is as modernistic outside as it is inside. The facade is of white plaster trimmed with gleaming chromium, and is oddly flanked on one side by the home of Miss Genevieve Wimsatt, a house which is filled with rare Chinese furnishings, and the doorway of which is guarded by two ancient wrought-iron lions of Oriental design; and on the other side by a relic of the days of Gen. Grant. Miss Wimsatt is now in China where she spends as much time as possible collecting more objets d'art for her home, which at present is occupied by Mr. Jerome Frank, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and his family.

Recalls Earlier Home.

Several years ago, Miss Katherine Phillips, daughter of former Representative and Mrs. Thomas W. Phillips, jr., and who is now Mme. Van Hoorn, wife of the Netherlands Minister to Austria and Hungary, decorated a small house on Florida avenue, in semimodernistic style. The house adjoined the gardens of her parents' home on Sixteenth street, and for some time the selection of fittings for this house occupied her. Later she was married to the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation in Washington, Mr. Lucien van Hoorn, and almost immediately left for Europe where she since has been making her home.

There are several homes in the Capital which boast modernistic rooms, but to date, Mrs. Tucker's new house is the first all modernistic residence in Washington.

Built-in Furniture.

The house, which is an English-basement building, has a dining room on the entrance floor. The furniture is built into the walls, some of which have modernistic paintings. There is a small, complete bar adjoining this, and on the second floor, two drawing rooms have been made into one large room, which is decorated in yellow. There is a fireplace at each end of the room, and cleverly concealed bookcases hide the collection of books in less modern covers which might mar the appearance of the room.

Mrs. Tucker will remain with Mr. and Mrs. Pulver until her house is settled, and then her friends will flock, not only to greet this popular young matron, but to see her new home.

Consul at Aden, Arabia, And Bride in New York

Mr. Leo J. Callanan, United States consul at Aden, Arabia, is at the Hotel Lincoln, in New York City, with his bride, formerly Miss Helene English Bradley, of Ware, Mass. They were married February 20, and plan to sail for Alexandria, en route to Aden, tomorrow. Survey Reveals Women's Flair For Inventions

Inventive genius, an outstanding Anglo-Saxon trait, is now being manifested by women in increasing numbers. This is revealed by a study of the latest report of the United States Patent Office.

Judging from the number of patents recently granted to women and the types of inventions recorded, it would seem women not only excel in designing articles of special value to their sex but often rival men in their own territory. Patents issued to women recently, in fact, cover every conceivable activity, with different phases of housekeeping appliances comprising only 28 per cent.

Although American women were eligible to obtain patents in 1790, no woman applied for one until 1809.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am married and have three nice little children. I am only 26 and my husband is a few years older. We have been married nine years. He was a devoted husband and father until two years ago. He is accused of running around with two girls who bear a bad reputation. He stays out late of nights, often until 12 or 1 o'clock and most of the time when he comes in he is quite drunk.

* * * *

No matter where I go nowadays some obliging person tells me about these two girls and my husband. The girls live right near us. My husband used to take me places with the children, but he never takes us out any more. We own our own home and he is a business man.

* * * *

I have worried myself almost crazy and don't know a happy minute. I dread the thought of leaving my home and I would rather die than part with my children. I can't believes he loves either of these girls, but I think his conduct is a disgrace to his family.

* * * *

Do you think if he had the love for me he once had he would act in such a manner? Is there any way I can win back his love and have a happy home again for the sake of our dear little children? Please give me your best advice.

DISHEARTENED.

Wronged Wife's Role.

DEAR DISHEARTENED: Psychologists say the man who is being faithless to a faithful wife carries a heavy burden of secret guilt even though he may fancy himself an emancipated modern liberal, ethically speaking, or an apostle of such principles as "we live but once," "my life is my own to live as I please," "don't frustrate self-expression and self-development by rigid conformity to outmoded doctrines of Puritan morality," and so on.

* * * *

They say the wife who confronts her husband with tears, reproaches and accusations turns this burden of secret guilt into active animosity and resentment against herself, inviting open domestic warfare and probable recourse to the divorce courts.

* * * *

They say the wife who, on the other hand, pretends convincingly she doesn't know, could never be persuaded her husband is faithless, stands every chance of winning his everlasting gratitude and a return of single-minded devotion, since he yearns because of his very sense of guilt to redeem himself in his own eyes. A man's technical transgression against his marriage vows does not always mean he is out of love with his wife.

* * * *

The psychologists' preferred course of action demands heroic self-discipline on the wife's part and the ability to rise above a sentimental evaluation of her situation, but, at least, she is repaid, they say, in the coinage of whatever financial and social security her position as a married woman represents.

* * * *

Unless you feel capable of making your own way in life, or possess conclusive evidence which would justify the courts in conceding you divorce and an alimony allowance sufficient to protect your own and your children's future, you may be doing the wisest thing by drying your tears, stiffling your sighs, stiffening your upper lip, and assuming the role of blind wife or legitimate siren. If your husband has already been placed on the offensive by your attitude, however, a gesture toward separation or divorce may be your only remaining weapon for shocking him out of his flagrant misconduct. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Psychiatrists' Hat Selections Decried by Millinery Stylist

THE PSYCHIATRISTS who advise tired-of-it-all middle-aged women to go out and buy a red hat may know all about maladjustments and frustrations, but they don't know much about millinery. That's the conviction of Mme. Lucienne Bertrand, Frenchwoman, who will present a style show of spring hats at the Palais Royal this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

"Those middle-aged women in bright red hats!" exclaimed Mme. Bertrand with feeling and gestures. "If the psychiatrists knew how I suffer when I see such sights they would not advise such things. The women would do better to follow the advice of saleswomen instead of doctors who know nothing about millinery."

The saleswoman is always right. Or at least she's almost always right, believes the volatile little Frenchwoman, who wears hats with that certain air. She not only wears them. She also designs them.

After the saleswoman has tried about three models on a customer's head, she has the customer typed as neatly as if she had shoved her into a pigeon hole, according to Mme. Bertrand. And the second most important thing in buying a new hat is to select one that suits your type. The first thing is to learn how to wear it. That's where most women fall short, Mme. Bertrand is convinced. They perch them on the back of their head or pull them too far down on one side or yank them too far over their eyes. Again it's the saleswoman who can show you how your hat should be tilted to bring out all your best points.

And now for the fashion trends of the moment and for several moments to come. Mme. Bertrand got so excited when she described them she blinked her round brown eyes very fast and waved her small hands in fluttery little movements.

Sailor styles, she said, are excellent, especially for women who wear tailored things. Yes, she admitted, they are hard to wear, but can be made less difficult if they are slanted a bit over one eye. Mme. Bertrand touched her own smart headgear to prove her point. Made of black straw it had a softly rolled brim faced in white.

In addition to sailors of all types the shallow crowned Confederate cap is high up in the spring millinery running. But the short cut to smartness for any woman, according to the designer, lies in selecting a hat that is becoming and then having it made up in several fabrics and colors.

Difficulty of Doing Two Tasks Equally Well Is Commonest Objection to the Matron-Teacher

Married and Single Ranks Both Contribute Noted Educators.

In recent years the question of the married woman teacher has caused divided opinion among both educators and laymen. Considering modern trends in education, are spinsters more efficient in the schoolroom than their married sisters? This is the second of three articles on women teachers.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

POSSIBLY THE greatest objection raised to the married woman teacher is that no person can do two tasks equally well. Certainly it would seem the spinster with no home duties could devote her attention whole-heartedly to teaching.

In the light of this, Rudyard Kipling's widely quoted line, "He travels the fastest who travels alone," might be applied to the single-woman teacher who, not being preoccupied with domestic interests, can give her best efforts to her work.

The number of single women among the outstanding educators today would seem to bear out this idea. Of those who have been hailed as famous teachers there is, for example, Dr. Martha Carey Thomas, president emeritus of Bryn Mawr College. A graduate of Cornell, she studied at Zurich, where she was awarded a Ph. D., the first woman ever to receive such a doctorate at a European university. Later she became professor of English at Bryn Mawr and the first college executive to be called "dean." Few women in the United States have been recipients of a longer list of honors than Dr. Thomas.

Another unmarried woman who began as a teacher and later became a college executive is Dr. Mary Emma Woolley. First a teacher at Wheaton Seminary, subsequently she was elected to the faculty of Wellesley College. In 1900 she became president of Mount Holyoke College.

Dr. Ada Comstock, unmarried, won acclaim as a teacher in the University of Minnesota, was later dean of that college, then dean of Smith College before she was made president of Radcliffe in 1923.

Dr. Virginia Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard College, and Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar, are two other single women who rank among the most noted of modern educators.

Not only in this country but in Europe there are spinsters who have become outstanding educators. In Italy there is Dr. Maria Montessori. The first woman in her country to obtain the degree of doctor of medicine, she later became interested in training feeble-minded children. Her success in this work led her to turn her attention to the education of normal children. As a result, she eventually founded the Montessori system of teaching, the central principle of which is to allow pupils to unfold themselves. Dr. Montessori's system has attracted wide attention among laymen, as well as professional educators.

Spinster Successes Many.

The list of spinsters who are or have been noted teachers could go on indefinitely. But what about married women teachers? Are there any today whose achievements rank with those of many unmarried educators?

J. L. Kinsow, in his pamphlet called "The Case of the Married Woman Teacher," answers these questions as follows: "While there are scattered examples of married women who have attained success as teachers, any analysis of the subject will prove that the list of married women educators—compared with the unmarried—is neither so lengthy nor so distinguished.

"Why? Obviously because a married woman can not give the necessary attention to her teaching and her home. She is, in fact, usually too much preoccupied with domestic interests to concentrate on her work outside the home. And since, in most cases, she is teaching only for the money, she is generally unwilling to obtain additional professional training. The married woman, then, tends to stagnate professionally in an era when it is essential that teachers keep abreast of the times."

Case of Ella Flagg Young.

Yet there are some married women in the teaching profession, as in other lines of work, who have achieved marked success since the turn of the century.

Among these was Ella Flagg Young, who, after a long career as a teacher, became a professor of education in a university and was later made superintendent of schools in Chicago, which position she held until her resignation in 1915. As an educator and the first woman president of the National Education Association, Mrs. Young occupies a notable position in the history of outstanding American women.

Mrs. Emily James Putnam is another distinguished educator. A teacher of Greek in the Packer Collegiate Institute in Brooklyn, she married George Haven Putnam, the publisher, in 1899. Later she became a lecturer on Greek history and literature in Barnard College, a position in which she was particularly successful.

Mrs. Helen Loring Grenfell, another noted educator, was married when she was elected State superintendent of public instruction in Colorado. Her phenomenal success is that capacity led to her appointment as commissioner of the State Penitentiary and Reformatory with full control of the penal institutions of the State, the first woman ever intrusted with such duties.

"The Moonlight-School Lady," Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, is another woman whom marriage did not deter from a successful career. Starting a campaign against adult illiteracy, she established night schools in her Rowan County, Ky. The success of this school led to the founding of similar institutions throughout the United States.

Further proof that some married women are satisfactory teachers was borne out a few years ago in the District of Columbia when the employment of married women as teachers was made the subject of a city-wide discussion and referendum. Of the 70 civic groups voting on the question, 57 favored married women as public school teachers. Seven voted against employing married women, and 6 groups were non-committal.

This and the recent action of the District Board of Education—in abrogating the marriage clause as its applied to teachers—would further indicate married teachers are satisfactory.

(Read in tomorrow's Post the opinion of four authorities on the subject of the married woman teacher.)

Jump Trump Rebid.

The hand below, a difficult problem in bidding, was one submitted to the readers of the Redbook Magazine as part of a Nation-wide contest which I hold in its pages every year.

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The correct bidding to reach the Grand Slam should proceed in the following manner: North should open with one spade. South, in view of his seven-card suit, the possession of three Aces and a mild fit with North's spades, should shade the usual requirements and respond with three hearts—realizing if he bids only two hearts he will not adequately portray the strength of his hand.

Over three hearts North has a very fine bid available—he can make the Jump Trump Rebid of four spades, showing practically a solid suit over partner's Forcing Takeout. North is justified in making this bid, as in addition to his practically solid spade suit he has a very valuable card in the King of his partner's bid suit. North's bid showing the spade suit encourages South tremendously. He becomes interested in a Slam and makes the conventional Four No-trump bid. North, in turn, hearing the previous bidding, should not thoughtlessly respond with five or even six spades, but should make the conventional Five Notrump response. He has not two Aces, but has one Ace and the Kings of all bid suits which marks South's four notrump as being predicated on three Aces.

Thus, North's five notrump response is compulsory. Everything is now easy for South; he knows that North has six cards or more in the spade suit topped by the Ace-King-Queen and the King of hearts and there must be a good play for seven with three or four sure entries in Dummy to set up the heart suit. Over five notrump South jumps right to seven spades.

Young College-Trained Women Taking Steps to Lift Politics Into Realm of Public Service

By Malvina Lindsay.
Women's Page Editor.

IN THE BABEL in Washington the voice of the college woman is scarcely a whisper, complains Dean Theodore A. Distler, of Lafayette College. The educator, in a recent address to Mount Holyoke alumnae, pointed out that while the Administration had heard the voice of labor, of capital, of ex-service men, of all sorts of organized interests, it had not heard the "collective voice of that most intelligent of our constituency, the college man and college woman."

* * * *

Dr. Distler's charge raises a serious question for all educated women—college or otherwise—to ponder. Is it true that the more intelligent women are futilely sitting back in a "too proud to fight" attitude while the feminine agitators and sentimentalists are stirring up all sorts of mischief by half-baked propaganda?

* * * *

Women particularly face a responsibility in this matter because so many of them who have educational opportunities have the leisure later to apply their knowledge and talents to the social and political problems of the day. Are they going then to retreat into an amateur pursuit of the arts and the passing of resolutions in study clubs or are they going to go out boldly to shout in the market place?

ON THE SURFACE it might seem that some of the organizations having large college woman membership, such as the National League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women, had been a little too detached and ladylike. With evangelists of ignorance, prejudice, class and racial hatred running amuck, it might rightly be expected that the proponents of independent thinking and fair judgment should be more militant.

* * * *

It might be argued that the time had come for these organizations and for all other women's groups dedicated to the passionless pursuit of truth to get up on the soap box and yell: War is war and if the other side is using the weapons of emotionalism, prejudice and oratorical trickery to gain its ends, the only thing to do, it would seem, would be to fight fire with fire. After all the end—that of saving civilization from the mob—might justify the means.

* * * *

Such methods while being effective for the moment would bring uncertain results in the end. Government, like art, is long and the more conservative women's groups, while undoubtedly needing to manifest more crusading zeal against organized ignorance, have, in general, proceeded on the right path. It is encouraging that their long sowing of seed is now beginning to bear harvest.

UP TO WITHIN recent years it began to seem as though the so-called practical woman politician with precinct-captain vision and the social leader able to swing campaign contributions might remain permanently in the ascendancy in public life. But now surging to the front in both political parties are the younger college-trained women, who see Government in terms of economic principle and social welfare rather than in terms of jobs and votes, and gang dominance. Many of these got their political training in non-partisan organizations.

* * * *

An increasing number of women who are noted for their social and economic contributions, who stand on their own feet professionally, are filling important public offices. Recent examples are Judge Florence Allen, Josephine Roche, Secretary Perkins and Katherine Lenroot. The rising political intelligence of women is demanding the elimination of the feminine figurehead from public office.

* * * *

Even more significant is the popularity of legislative study among women's groups. While men's party organizations may be still holding smokers and barbecues and lining up the boys to get out the vote, the women's political clubs are studying social security programs and currency problems. Out of this may come what many believe may be the salvation of democracy, the development of a political aristocracy. The Nation has long been crying for educated and idealistic citizens to go into politics. It looks now as if the young educated woman might do what the young educated men of the country have so far failed to do—lift politics into the realm of public service.

Stitch-in-Time Shop Rescues Burned Frocks

Shopping Guide Discovers Place That Specializes in Weaving in Holes.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BURNING a hole in your best frock loses its tragic aspect if you know of a certain stitch-specialty.

Here you can bring any frock in your wardrobe and if there's mending to be done they'll do it. Bullet holes or burns, snags or tears, it's all the same. With an eyeless needle they set to work and soon the wrong is righted.

It doesn't matter what kind of fabric must be repaired. They can reweave linens or woolens, silk, both real and synthetic, plain, crinkly patterns, or even print and plaids.

Remember, if there's a mite of a hole, better have it fixed immediately, for the longer you wait, the larger it grows. They'll tell you here, a stitch-in-time saves nine—and saves money, too.

Paragon of Lipsticks.

Found—in the cosmetics department of a Washington store — a paragon of lipsticks!

You know the name well, and maybe you know the lipstick. But don't be too sure! For even though you bought one put out by the same company, several months ago, it isn't going to be like this one. For this is new and different, and is proof that a lipstick may be indelible and natural looking, too.

It's unique in another way. Taste it and you'll find a lipstick with an actual flavor! When you apply it you are pleased by its delicate fragrance, delighted with its taste and thrilled with the smooth, easy manner in which it goes on.

It comes in two sizes, one a plump, gay-toned case; the other, a subdeb, in a simple case. The latter is all you'll ask for a small light lipstick to carry in an evening purse or crowded pocketbook.

White Hair Preferred.

Just why so many women should dread having white hair is hard to understand, for certainly nothing is more distinctive looking—and nothing more flattering. Needless to say these two things are true only if the hair is kept well and not allowed to become dull and yellow looking.

Take for instance a young woman, with a lovely skin, and sparkling eyes. If her hair has turned prematurely gray she can make it one of her best features by keeping it white and giving it a live-looking silvery sheen. Older women who feel that their gray hairs put them in the old age ranks will look years younger by treating their hair in the same maner.

It's a simple thing to do, and a safe one. Just try a certain snow-drift lotion (made of harmless vegetable oils), which you may either comb through your hair, or put a little in the final rinse water. It makes an ordinary head of gray hair into a crowning glory of silvery white.

Next Comes Face Patter.

There are few things that will help a dry or coarse skin so surely as the right kind of cream. And there's nothing that will help that cream to do its full amount of good so readily as a facial patter.

You don't have to invest in an expensive patter to prove the truth of this. You may buy a simple rubber one that is easy to keep clean, and easy to use, and before a week is out you'll see that your skin is smoother, and has a far more delicate texture.

This small patter comes with a little spongelike rubber puff which is exactly what you need. Most powder puffs do more harm than good. They become caked with dirt, and are harsh on the skin. They literally grind dust and small particles into the pores, cause blackheads and irritation. You may use this rubber puff with confidence, for it washes easily and with each washing is softer and downier.

Patter and puff sell together for only 25 cents.

Meet Reversible Bag.

A certain gay divorcee leads a double life!

Doubters will please call at the purse counter in a local store and there they'll see the "Gay Divorcee"—a stunning little pocketbook—and they'll understand about this double life.

You see, it's a reversible bag. One side is red. The other blue. In the daytime you use it as a red bag, and at night it turns up as blue.

It's also available in brown and beige, red and black, blue and white.

Contrary to your expectations you'll find it modestly priced only $1. Isn't that a grand price to pay, for in this instance you buy one bag and end up by having two!

Here's Lady Luck.

If you've been looking for Lady Luck, you'll find her on the counter of a local store. For Lady Luck is the name of a double vanity, modeled off like a horseshoe.

It contains a cake of rouge and a place for loose powder. You may buy it in solid colored enamel, almost any shade, or else gold-plate effect with pin stripes in black, red and green.

The compact is truly a phenomenal value for $1.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Fruits Bidding for Housewives' Favor With Varieties and Prices Reasonable

Mills, Post Staff.

Here is the array of fruit markets are offering this week-end in plentiful supply and at reasonable prices. The slender stalks of delicate pink rhubarb and the scarlet strawberries are the first fruits of the spring. The others belong to the disappearing winter season, but are none the less palatable.

Delicate Pink Rhubarb Lends Itself Easily to Novel Dishes.

By Dorothea Duncan.

FRUIT will play an important role in your week-end menus if you make the most of what the grocer offers this week at a reasonable price. There is delicate pink rhubarb, tender young stalks, too, ripe strawberries, firm golden grapefruit, Florida oranges at their best again, large yellow-green pears, smooth - skinned bananas flecked with brown and plenty of apples, mostly Winesaps and Delicious.

Consider a strawberry and rhubarb pie for the Saturday dinner. The unusually tart flavor of the rhubarb blends divinely with the mild sweetness of fresh strawberries. Try making the filling this way: Use 2 cups of strawberries and 1½ cups of diced rhubarb combined with 2 tablespoons of quick cooking tapioca and 1¼ cups of sugar. Let this mixture stand for 15 minutes, or while the pie crust is being prepared. Bake the pie, this amount of filling will make a 9-inch one, in a hot oven (425-450 degrees F.) for 15 minutes, then decrease the heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and continue baking 20 to 30 minutes longer.

Rhubarb With Orange.

If you have any rhubarb left over bake it with orange juice, and serve it for Sunday breakfast or with plain sugar cookies for Sunday supper. Prepare it this way: Wash, but do not peel the rhubarb, and cut it in 1-inch pieces. Add one-half as much sugar as fruit and put it in an earthenware or ovenized baking dish. Pour over the contents just enough orange juice to keep the fruit from burning. Bake in a moderate oven (350-375 degrees F.) until the fruit is soft and reduced to pulp.

Try broiled grapefruit as the Sunday dinner appetizer, especially if you are serving fowl or a roast of veal. Cut the fruit in half and loosen the meat with a sharp knife. Dot the grapefruit halves generously with butter and sprinkle with brown sugar. Place the halves underneath the broiler just long enough to melt the butter and sugar. Remove and serve at once while hot.

The pears as you buy them may be too hard to be attractive served raw. If this is the case they should be allowed to soften at room temperature until ripe enough to use in salads or as raw dessert fruit. The pears may be baked or stewed while still firm. This firmness will be an advantage in cooking the pears as they are more likely to hold their shape. Try baked cinnamon pears. The children will love them. Peel the pears, cut in half lengthwise and core them. Arrange the halves, round side up, in a shallow baking pan. Make a syrup by using ¾ cup sugar and 1½ cups of water and cooking five minutes after the mixture has come to a boil. While the syrup is boiling, dissolve ¼ pound of red cinnamon drops in the syrup. Pour this mixture over the pears and bake until tender in a moderate oven. Keep the pears covered while baking. Baste frequently if the pears are not coloring evenly.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

IF MARCH 8 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

Be careful that the advice which may be offered by a know-it-all type of person on this date does not lead you to take the wrong action in a business or social matter. It will be good judgment to remember that sometimes experimenting with short-cut methods results in the loss of valuable time, and if you try them this may be the outcome. Politeness in business probably will counteract a tendency on the part of many to be abrupt to the point of rudeness. In social contacts it will be advisable to refrain from being overly familiar, regardless of how intimate you may be with those present.

The wise young woman on this date will keep a careful watch over their tempers and tongues, so as to avoid trouble. Married and engaged couples, as well as those whose hearts are aflame with love, will be wise not to say or do anything to arouse resentment by showing a decided preference for something they know the other party is prejudiced against.

If a woman, and March 8 is your birthday, you do not have to worry about the future, for in all likelihood fate will treat you most considerately. You must never allow your thoughts to be dominated by the fear of what may occur in the dim and vague hereafter. You are going to have a great many blessings, the result probably of friendships and marriage. Your ability in domestic matters should assure your success in creating a happy home atmosphere. You will always be able to solve any problem if you will but make a courageous effort. Office, dietary or secretarial work should offer opportunities for you to demonstrate your talents advantageously.

THREE MEN and DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Diana Carmichael's grandmother kept a boarding house down at the end of Mason avenue, where the town trailed out into empty lots and railway fences. Diana slept with her grandmother in the back parlor, and papa's cot was shoved under the sink, in the big closet, which had once been a dressing room. Diana suffered at being poor. She could not dress as the other girls dressed. She longed, too, to go to college. That ambition was so strong that Diana had no thought left for boys. Peter Platt, who had a room in Gram's house, advised Diana to work her way through college. She decided to get a job. For the first time her wealthy friend, Joan, asked Diana to spend the night at her home.

AFTER they had finished their lessons—Joan's only a little less clean and correct and well-done than Diana's—they walked about the place. It was very large; it was as large, Diana thought, as two square blocks.

Far at the back were fences and stables, all painted clean white, white chickens in white runways, lengths of clean paddock, where young horses stood with their heads on each other's neck symmetrically, looking over the fence.

One could not hate Joan; one could not even be jealous of her; she was too sweet, too unspoiled. But what a place to live in!

The girls stopped at the old sun dial, and Joan scraped from its face a light strewing of leaves.

Diana was speechless. She had never seen a sun dial; she had supposed only queens and kings had sun dials.

"Ten minutes of six," Joan said. "Let's go in and see if we can—Oh, hello, Bruce! Di, this is my cousin, Bruce Palmer!"

A young man had come up behind them on the terrace; he stood there looking at them unsmilingly. Joan kissed him, jerking his dark head down with her slender arms, perhaps not sorry to have Diana see with what a handsome cousin she might take liberties; he endured her embrace good-naturedly.

"Be calm, my poor girl," he said. "Restrain yourself! I'll hear your case presently—presently."

"Diana," Joan said, flushed and breathless, altogether a most charming and unusual Joan, "this is Bruce."

"Diana." Bruce acknowledged the name. He looked at Diana. And Diana stood there, in the full flood of the sunset light, and looked at him.

He had a nice brown face and a friendly hand-grip. But it was the look in his eyes that rendered Diana speechless. There was a vitality, a something young and hard and brown, and eager about him that stirred her to her soul. Bruce Palmer—Bruce Palmer—the name rang in her heart like the tolling of a bell.

Loved Him Instantly.

Something happened to her, there in the sunset garden by the sun dial, that all the years of her life were not to undo; upon her always would be the stamp of this insufferably exquisite moment, when she stood in her blue silk gown, by the sundial, and Bruce Palmer looked at her.

Diana at the moment could sense only that she loved him instantly, completely; she surrendered everything that was herself—everything that she might ever be—to his keeping in that first minute.

"What are you two wenches doing?" Bruce said, lingering.

"Oh, nothing," Joan said. "We've been wandering around."

"I thought that Newbegin infant was coming."

"No," Joan said. "Diana."

"Well," he presently began, "I've got to change. What are you girls doing tonight?"

"You're taking us to a movie," Joan answered promptly.

"No such luck! I'm going to the Kents' shindig. And I've got to get going!" He went away toward the house, turned at the first of the brick steps up from the terrace and called back: "Diana what?"

"What?" Joan called. He repeated the two words and she laughed and Diana laughed. "Carmichael!" Joan shouted, and Bruce, just before disappearing, said, "I get it!"

"He and Aunt Emily are staying here tonight," Joan explained, when he was gone. "Isn't he a dear? I'm so fond of him! He's just like a wonderful, big brother."

Diana said nothing. Before dinner she and Joan went down to one of the many sitting rooms, and joined Joan's brother Duncan and Mr. and Mrs. Rowley and the imposing Mrs. Palmer—a big woman, with a high bust and big teeth, and a horse's white-rimmed suspicious eye. Diana hardly dared raise her voice in this august gathering; she did not think Mrs. Palmer's manner very friendly.

Bruce, very stunning in his evening clothes, came in to say good-night, with his big coat on his arm and his gloves and his silk hat in his hand.

"Good-night, everyone," he said. "Good-night, Diana!" Diana could make no sign, no sound in answer; she smiled a strained smile, wondered whether he saw her confusion. All the grown-ups began to gather up wraps and bags; they were going to a dinner. Mrs. Palmer, magnificent in a fur-edged wrap, put a big hand on Diana's shoulder as she passed the girls on her way out.

"I want to talk to you," she said abruptly. "Come see me."

Diana's heart soared.

"This—this week?"

"Any time. Telephone first!" Mrs. Palmer gathered up her wrap and went on her way. Joan and Diana and Duncan, a nice, negligible boy of 20, sat down to dinner together.

Later they went upstairs, considering Duncan's rather ungracious offer to take them to "the flicker." But they had seen the Bayhead picture, and the chance of anything good being in Mountain View or San Jose was vague.

"Find out what's in San Jose, Dunk," Joan said. But Duncan only growled, "Oh, find out yourself!"

In the end a boy telephoned him, and he laughed a great deal at the telephone, and hung up to observe briefly that he was "going out with Bud." Then Connie telephoned Joan, and they had an interminable talk, in which Joan evidently had something to explain, for she kept saying in pleasant impatience, "Don't be so silly, Connie. That wasn't it at all. Well, I can't now. No, I can't. Well, there's a reason."

Diana did not pay much attention. She could hear Joan's voice, and some of her words, but they did not matter—nothing mattered.

She had wandered out to the terrace, and sat there in a long low basket chair, her feet up, a comfortable great pillow pulled under her shoulders.

Moonlight streamed down upon her and upon the sundial 20 feet away. It sent a slender blot of shadow onto the tiles of the terrace. Diana lay wrapped in a sort of floating ecstasy; she wanted to be alone, to think.

Bruce—and Bruce—and Bruce. There was living in the world this dark-haired man, in golf clothes, in evening dress, assured, handsome, careless.

Shudders of joy went over her. She did not think; she felt.

"Connie's a very dear little person," Joan said, coming out to the terrace, dropping into the chair beside Diana, "but how she does like to manage her friends! She's jealous now."

"Why should Consuelo be jealous?" Diana managed to say.

"Oh, your being here!" Joan supplied, lightly.

"Oh, silly," Diana murmured.

385 Farmers Idle in Every Virginia County

Means to Stimulate Employment Suggested by Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 7.—There is an average of 385 farmers unemployed in every county in Virginia, two-thirds of whom may be considered permanently unemployed or practically so, the farm placement committee of the State advisory council, Virginia State employment service, reported today.

The report showed the possibility of developing subsisting farming and listed ten suggestions for stimulation of farm employment.

These included raising of pheasants, quail, rabbits, water fowl and pets for the city market; production of honey and marketing in attractive containers; raising of fur-bearing animals; sheep and goat raising; extension of the poultry and squab-raising business, and standardizing and packaging farm commodities, which not only would increase labor requirements, but would increase the cash farm income and provide the consuming public with superior products of obvious quality, the report said.

The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Hotel 'Racket' Laid to Couple In Baltimore

D.C. Woman Charged With Robbing Guests, Man of Getting Property.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 7.—A new but simple racket was disclosed today by Baltimore police at a hearing before Magistrate James R. Cadden of two persons who were held for action of the grand jury under bonds totaling $3,000.

Mrs. Emmalee Renn, 23, was charged with larceny and her husband, Edward B. Renn, 29, was accused of receiving stolen goods. Renn gave his address as H street northwest, Washington.

Detectives, who made the arrest, said the woman would knock at a guest's door in some downtown hotel, murmur she had made a mistake and faint. The officers said when the guest went for a glass of water, she would quickly appropriate his wallet or other valuables and disappear before the guest returned.

Mrs. Renn was specifically charged with the larceny of a wallet containing $59 from Gershel Kaplan, of the Bronx, N. Y. Another charge accuses her of the larceny of a woman's handbag, containing $4.78 in cash, a compact and some valuable papers.

62 Millions Budget Voted In Maryland

Proposal Goes to House, Where Added Slashes Are Planned.

By Francis O. White, Jr.,
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 7.—Without debate and with only one dissenting vote, the Maryland Senate today passed the budget appropriations bill for the next two fiscal years. As amended by the finance committee, the measure carries appropriations totaling $62,262,387.45.

The lone negative vote was that of Senator Joseph Donovan (Democrat), Howard County, who said he could not conscientiously vote on the measure because the Senate had "only half an hour" for consideration of the bill and its score or more amendments. The bill now goes to the House. Meanwhile, the ways and means committee of the lower branch, of which Representative Kent R. Mullikin, Prince Georges County, is chairman, has been studying the items and plans additional cuts. Slashes made in the Senate amounted to more than $200,000.

With the budget out of the way, the Senate lost no time in passing the administration bill fixing the tax rate at 22 cents on the $100 for the next biennium and also authorizing a bond issue of $855,000 for building construction and equipment purposes and for financing accrued liability of the teachers' retirement fund. The Senate is now prepared to tackle the various revenue-producing measures and other important legislation.

License Report Overridden.

By a vote of 14 to 13, the Senate overrode an unfavorable report from the finance committee on the bill to license wholesale gasoline dealers for the purpose of requiring them to sell gasoline in Maryland at prices no greater than those charged in Pennsylvania and Delaware. The bill was introduced by Senator Harold Cobourn, Cecil County, who led the fight to substitute the bill for the report, and the measure was sent to the third reading file.

Other new measures sent to the Senate desk include these:

Regulating elections in Washington County and also regulating the issuance of liquor licenses in that county.

Authorizing Harford County commissioners to appoint a substitute judge of the orphans court.

Authorizing the town of Oxford to increase its tax levy.

In addition to passing a number of Senate bills providing local legislation for the several counties, the Senate passed several House bills of State-wide interest, which now go to the Governor for his action. These include:

Regulating the sale of narcotics and outlawing the sale of marihuana cigarettes.

Reducing the fine for automobile speeding from $25 to $10.

Prohibiting the marriage of members of the Malay race with either white or colored persons. This bill is directed chiefly against the intermarriage of Filipinos and members of other races.

Proposal Killed.

The House added its disfavor to the proposal to place educational qualifications of candidates for admission to the bar under jurisdiction of the Maryland Court of Appeals. The measure, by Representative Charles Marbury, Prince Georges County, was similar to that sponsored by Senator Ridgely Melvin, Anne Arundel County, killed in the Senate Tuesday, when an unfavorable report was adopted and the "clincher" applied. The House proposal met a like fate.

Bills to create another State commission and to establish a State NRA and an administration measure to provide for a system of unemployment insurance were presented in the Senate. Under terms of the first measure the Governor would be empowered to appoint a board of highway safety commissioners of three members for terms of four years, the chairman to receive $4,000 annually and the other members, $2,500 each. The commission would set up rules for inspection of motor vehicles and provide a period during which all motor vehicles would be inspected.

Senator Harold Coburn, Cecil County, introduced a bill to regulate the issuance of marriage licenses in that county and to prohibit advertising places where marriage ceremonies are performed. Coburn, earlier in the session, presented a similar bill directed chiefly against the marriage "racket" at Elkton, in his home county. This measure passed the Senate, but was sidetracked in the House.

"Gretna Green" Racket.

The new bill provides that licenses shall be issued by the court clerk between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. week days and bans advertising in any form. It also provides marriages shall be performed only by ministers or officials of a religious body or order of an established church. Senator Coburn reiterated his purpose to break up the "Gretna Green" racket.

Senator Hofferbert sponsored two other bills, one of which would allow blind persons to designate who should aid them in voting at elections. The other provides for establishment of codes of fair competition. Senator John Callan fathered a proposal to provide pensions for needy blind persons. Under existing law, assistance to blind persons in voting can be given only by election officials.

The Frederick County Sunday bill would make athletics either for profit or recreation lawful between 1 and 6 p. m.

Under terms of a measure by Representative Jacob Blum, Baltimore City, courts would not be required to allow alimony in any form or counsel fees unless it appears from evidence the wife's income is insufficient to care for her needs.

The following Senate bills were passed by the House and will become law when approved by the Governor:

Requiring the State roads commission to advertise for bids for all road work costing $500 or more, not, however, to apply to labor or material for road maintenance.

Transferring powers and duties of the Bel Air Sewerage Commission to the town commissioners.

Authorizing the Mayor and Council of Mount Lake Park to levy a tax rate up to $1 on the $100.

Tree Sawed Through Continues to Stand

By the Associated Press.

Bruington, Va., March 7.—Sawed through by workmen on Saturday, a huge poplar tree near here continued to stand today and was the object of great curiosity in this community.

The tree, which has a circumference of 21½ feet at 2-foot stump height, is said by old residents to be one of the largest they have ever seen. It is believed to contain nearly ten cords of wood.

Danger signs have been placed about it.

13 Million Set As Relief Need For Maryland

Special Session Likely Next January to Draw Tax Plan.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 7.—Maryland relief authorities have fixed $13,895,750 as the amount that will be needed for general relief purposes in the State for the period beginning March 15 and running to January 31, 1936.

The estimate was furnished by Harry Greenstein, State administrator, after a conference with several other relief officials and has been incorporated in the report of the legislative relief committee headed by Senator Stedman Precott, Montgomery County, of the Senate subcommittee, and Dr. Charles V. Hayden, St. Marys County, of the House committee.

Greenstein told the committee that a total of $8,661,250 would be required for the period, March 15 to September 30, and $5,234,500 more from the latter date to January 31, 1936.

Some Held Undeserving.

Although making no definite recommendation, the legislative relief committee, it is understood, contemplates a special session of the General Assembly next January on relief.

The committee report says many persons now on relief are living better than they did previously, and adds that some on the rolls ought not be there.

The committee's recommendations are:

That a committee of the Senate and House be appointed to make a study of the relief situation throughout the State, and report at the next legislative session.

Criticism Invited.

That a meeting of sufficient members of the Senate and House be called to determine in conjunction with the Governor, a definite State program, with forms of taxation necessary for its financing.

That the program be submitted to a group of representative citizens of the State for "constructive criticism," and as soon as possible drafted in a bill for presentation to the Legislature.

That this program be based on the assumption that the State would be required to raise no less than $2,000,000 and could raise no more than $4,000,000 in any calendar year.

The group also suggested that a nominal tax be levied against as many sources as possible, rather than a heavy impost on one or more sources.

Miss Perkins Says Social Law Is Near

Predicts Action in Time for Many States to Vote on It.

Addresses Southeastern Democratic Women in Richmond.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 7.—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins confidently expects "economic security legislation to be enacted in substantially all States this year," she told women Democrats from six Southeastern States here tonight.

Addressing Southern women attending the first of a series of conferences on government sponsored by the Democratic national committee, the Labor Secretary said she expected the pending economic security bill to become a Federal "law in sufficient time to enable many State Legislatures to act before adjournment."

"Public opinion is strongly favorable to unemployment insurance and old-age pensions and is becoming crystallized in favor of the measures proposed for the security of children and for the extension of preventative public health services," she said. "From many States we are getting reports that they are prepared to pass the necessary State legislation as soon as the economic security act has become law."

Trade Expansion Forecast.

Earlier in the day, addressing a group of Virginia labor and social work leaders chosen by herself, Miss Perkins blamed many current problems on the diversity of State labor laws; predicted that Virginia within the next 25 years would experience a great industrial expansion, some of it at the expense of other States.

Miss Perkins said in an interview that the information coming to the department indicated "a favorable reaction" to the Administration's social security program "from all parts of the South."

Commenting on Virginia's attitude, she referred to Senator Harry F. Byrd, saying "the Senator's figures on the cost of the program to Virginia are entirely too much."

"He figured it would cost the State $11,000,000 or $12,000,000," she said, "but we do not know where he got his estimates. We have figured the cost of the program in Virginia at about $350,000 in State funds."

Williamsburg Trip Planned.

Other matters of government are to be studied during the two-day conference, ending with a trip to the College of William and Mary tomorrow.

The conference brought to Richmond women from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. Mrs. Irving Whitehead, of Amherst County, who has directed preparations for the Richmond meeting, was the presiding officer today.

Others on the program were Virginia's committee women, Mrs. R. C. Watts, of Lynchburg; State Democratic Chairman J. Murray Hooker; Mrs. Louis Galleher, of Leesburg, representing the Young Democrats; Miss Harriet Elliott, formerly of the University of North Carolina, now aiding in the study plan for the national committee; Mrs. Wolfe, Miss Dewson, Mrs. Tillett and Miss Perkins.

On tomorrow's program are Mrs. Wolfe, Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, national president of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Miss Lavinia Engle, former member of the Maryland Legislature; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, representing the FERA; Mrs. A. J. McGuire, speaking for farm women; Mrs. Nelson Beck, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. Herbert Gregory, of Charlottesville, who has assisted Mrs. Whitehead.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 7.—Health officers from Montgomery, Carroll, Howard and Frederick counties met here today with Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health. The milk ordinance used in Hagerstown will be studied, with an idea of adopting it in other western Maryland communities.

There has been a noticeable decrease in contagious diseases spread by milk in the 3 years the standard ordinance has been in effect here, Health Officer Dr. W. Ross Cameron said.

Tomorrow sanitarians of the four counties will meet with a representative of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Ix Silk Concern Plans Enlarging Virginia Plant

Expansion Would Increase Firm's Production by About Two-Thirds.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 7.—Plans for an addition to the silk mill operated here by Frank Ix & Sons, which will increase its production by approximately two-thirds, are now being formulated by officials of the concern, it was learned today.

No specifications have been released by the concern, nor has it been stated when actual construction will begin. However, the city council recently granted a remittance of local taxes on the addition for the next five years, provided work is begun within 90 days. Elmer E. Burruss, local architect, has been employed to draw up specifications.

The addition will be placed near the present plant, located on Ware street. The city plans to lay several hundred feet of sidewalk on the location, provided the support of the property owners can be had.

The Ix company at present employs around 250 persons. Officials of the concern, it is reported, expect to start their own training school in order to employ local labor. Local residents will be trained here and employed as needed.

Bus Driver Acquitted In Death of Soldier

Bel Air, Md., March 7 (AP).—Tazewell A. Jolley, bus driver, of Richmond, Va., was acquitted of a charge of manslaughter by a Harford County Circuit Court jury today for the death of Howard A. Ellinger in an automobile accident on the Philadelphia road January 22.

Ellinger, a soldier at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, was killed as his automobile was crushed by the impact of the bus, driven by Jolley. The driver was held in jail here for 27 days before he was indicted by the grand jury and then released in $1,000 bail.

Two Jailed at Waynesboro in Death of Girl; Counsel Criticizes Detective

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., March 7.—Judge Joseph A. Glasgow, of Augusta County Circuit Court, today set 10 a. m. Saturday for a hearing to determine bond for James Parry and Ernest Carter, held since Monday night on charges of fatally assaulting Miss Pauline Parry, 18-year-old sister of the former, August 19, 1934. The hearing was granted at the request of Felix E. Edmunds and Louis F. Jordan, counsel for the two men who have been held in jail since Monday night.

Attorney Edmunds was bitter in his criticism of Detective Guy Miller, who brought the charges against his clients after three months of private investigation, saying that the officer "either failed to make a proper investigation or else was seeking publicity or the reward."

"He cannot possibly have sufficient facts to justify their arrest," Edmunds added.

Both attorneys demanded an immediate preliminary hearing on bail for Parry and Carter today, but with the announcement by Commonwealth's Attorney John D. White that his investigation would not be completed until Saturday, the men were ordered by Judge Glasgow to be held without bail until that day.

Mr. White stated that tomorrow afternoon he would question a Waynesboro merchant and an industrial plant employe who volunteered to give "valuable" information about the case.

A widespread police hunt which has extended into West Virginia has thus far failed to produce a third man sought in connection with Miss Parry's death.

Police say that Parry was the beneficiary of a $2,000 life insurance policy held by his sister, Mrs. Parry said her husband had received $300 of this money, but had sought to collect on the policy to settle a $600 hospital bill for his sister, who lingered unconscious for many days before her death.

Randolph Will Speak.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 7.—Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, will be the speaker at the annual banquet of the Urma Club, an organization of local independent merchants, next Tuesday, at the Masonic Temple.

Utility Firm Accepts Cut In Maryland

Total Slash of $325,000 to Benefit State's Small Users.

Potomac Concern Opens Way for Further Rate Contest.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 7.—Reductions in electric bills for small power users of as high as 16 per cent were assured Western Maryland householders today by the acceptance by the Potomac Edison Co. of the $325,000 reduction in gross revenues ordered by the Public Service Commission.

The acquiescence of the order by R. Paul Smith, president of the utility concern, brings to a close a fight that has been before the commissioners several times in the last three years. Smith notified the commission that he will "accept and obey" the ruling.

The final hearing took place in February, when the commission sought to reach an agreement with the power company on the allocation of the rate cuts. In announcing its decision a week ago, it also imposed its own schedule of rates on the company and allowed 10 days for acceptance or rejection of the order.

Industrial power users under the ruling receive small reductions or none at all. Users of electricity for household purposes are principally benefited.

In accepting the ruling, Smith notified the commission he did so with reservations. He declined to accept the basis of the regulatory body's forecast of revenues and expenses and its determination of the amount of reduction which should be allocated to Maryland customers.

These exceptions give the company the right to present and argue them in any future proceeding, Smith stated. The only course other than acceptance left open to the company was to prolong litigation, he added, which was undesirable.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 7.—If members of the Winchester Council have their way, citizens here will stand to benefit by a reduction of power and light rates. A resolution requesting the State corporation commission to continue an investigation of rates received unanimous approval of the body and has been forwarded to the Richmond office of the commission.

The resolution declares that the readjustments of rates here some years ago were of little or no benefit to the small consumers, their consumption never reaching the lower bracket rate, with the increased meter charges practically nullifying the reductions given the larger consumer.

1 Killed, 3 Hurt When Car Skids

Hagerstown Man Fatally Injured in Accident at Carlisle, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

Carlisle, Pa., March 7.—Roy G. Devault, 33, of Hagerstown, Md., was killed and three companions were injured in an automobile accident near here early today.

George B. Martin, 33, also of Hagerstown, was taken to a hospital in a serious condition. He suffered a skull fracture. Ray W. Shultz, of Hagerstown, and Edgar V. Latsbaugh, of Shippensburg, received minor injuries.

Shultz, driver of the auto, said the car skidded as it was passing another automobile. The group had been to Harrisburg to attend a meeting of meat dealers of a chain store and was on the way home at the time of the accident.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 7.—It was announced today that H. Marshall Homer, youngest member of the Berkeley County bar, has been appointed United States commissioner for the Northern District of West Virginia, effective immediately. The appointment was made by Federal Judge W. E. Baker, of Elkins.

Jurors Clear Closed Bank In Richmond

Officers Held Innocent of Any Criminal Responsibility.

Virginia Capital Had More Than $500,000 in Institution.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, March 7.—A special grand jury of five Richmond business men today cleared former officers of the defunct American Bank & Trust Co. of any criminal responsibility in connection with its failure in March, 1933.

The report, made to Judge John Ingram, of Hustings Court, concluded an investigation begun February 12 into this angle of the crash of the bank, which was the second largest in the State and had 40,000 depositors.

Foreman M. C. Branch and the other jurors said they did "not find that any sections of the banking law of the State of Virginia, in which acts are made criminal and for which penalties are imposed, had been violated."

The former officers who were exonerated include Oliver J. Sands and 12 vice presidents.

Among those who testified before the grand jury were State Banking Commissioner M. E. Bristow, Logan Ritchie, chief State bank examiner; Henry Gordon, Federal bank examiner; Mayor Bright, City Attorney James Cannon and City Comptroller Landon Edwards. The City of Richmond was one of the bank's largest depositors, having more than $500,000 there when it failed to reopen after the President's bank holiday.

Receivers have paid a dividend of 15 per cent and held out hope for another of 10 per cent next year.

Manager Cochran Announces Plays and Plans for National's "Little Season"

Three New Hits Are Booked for Spring Openers

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

When the eleventh annual spring and summer season of the National Theater Players is inaugurated on Easter Monday night, April 22, every promise is given that they will perpetuate their reputation of comprising the foremost repertoire company in America.

Returning from New York last Monday night, Stephen E. Cochran, manager of the National Theater and founder of the National Theater Players, over whose destinies he has presided with signal success ever since their first performance on May 18, 1925, announced that the first three plays of the 1935 season would be "Three Men on a Horse," "Accent on Youth" and "Post Road."

This is a beginning that augurs well for the National's "little season." It was only a few weeks ago that "Three Men on a Horse," then an utterly unknown quantity, was presented on the stage of the National preliminary to its Broadway opening, where it scored an immediate hit not only as one of the current season's major successes but as one of the funniest farces the American stage has seen in years. It is playing to capacity business at the present time, with seats selling many weeks in advance and soon will be made into a motion picture by Warner Brothers.

Adheres to Policy.

"Accent on Youth" is a Crosby Gaige production now playing in New York with Constance Cummings, former screen star and wife of Benn W. Levy, the playwright; Nicholas Hannen and Irene Purcell in the principal roles. "Post Road" is a mystery hit that has scored substantially with Lucille Watson starred, and Romaine Callender, a familiar member of the Players through several seasons, a featured member of the cast.

The selection of these strictly contemporary hits for the first three weeks of the National's summer season is no more than a continuation of Mr. Cochran's fixed policy to present the newest plays obtainable, with the best Metropolitan casts that can be recruited and material investiture that frequently excels that of the original production.

It is a significant fact that the National Theater Players are not recruited from the ranks of confirmed "stock actors," but invariably enlist the services of principals whose names are identified with Broadway's representative offerings. It was only a season or two ago that eight former members of the National Theater Players were appearing simultaneously on the Main street of theaterdom.

The Company's Graduates.

To list the total number who have distinguished themselves in the larger arena of the national theater would be quite a task. Among them, however, there come immediately to mind such popular figures as Roger Pryor, recent star of "Up Pops the Devil," "Blessed Event" and "There's Always Juliet" and now a cinema leading man on the West Coast; Minor Watson, here with Lunt and Fontanne in "Reunion in Vienna" and in George M. Cohan's "Pigeons and People"; Edward Arnold, also a screen luminary; Romaine Callender, now engaged as hereinabove noted; Kathryn Givney, touring with Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon and "Skeets" Gallagher in "Hollywood Holiday," a later Washington booking; Leona Powers, under contract to the Theater Guild of New York; Nancy Sheridan, under contract to the Shuberts; the late John Warner, Stanley Ridges, seen here with Helen Hayes in "Mary of Scotland," and more recently with Philip Merivale in "Valley Forge," both Theater Guild productions of the first rank; Donald Woods, at present a picture star for Warner Brothers; Ona Munson, leading woman with Dennis King in "Petticoat Fever," a play that Washington was to get, but didn't, that scored a hit on Broadway when it opened there last Monday night, and so on, ad lib., and almost ad infinitum.

May Present Stars.

While it has never been Panjandrum Cochran's policy to follow the so-called "star system" in casting his plays, it is intimated that an exception to this rule may be made this spring. There are, for example, several new plays that may be presented with stars who will be seen in them later on Broadway.

One of these comes from the office of Crosby Gaige and was written by Caesar Dunne under the title of "Silhouette." Another is "Man About Women," by Robert Milton, and still another, "Shining Armor," by Rosemary Casey and B. Iden Payne.

And all this at a night top price of $1 and a matinee top of 50 cents. No greater amusement bargain than this is to be found anywhere in the United States.

Washington is practically becoming clogged with celluloid celebrities. With W. S. Van Dyke, ace M-G-M director, spending something over a week "vacationing" in the National Capital, and Henry Hathaway, director of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," a more recent arrival, Hunt Stromberg, M-G-M producer, will arrive here Saturday morning to confer with Mr. Van Dyke concerning their next picture.

On Friday, Nelson Eddy, the distinguished barytone, who appeared briefly in a solo number in "Student Tour," will arrive to join the "film colony."

Mr. Eddy's most recent assignment was opposite Jeanette MacDonald in the film version of "Naughty Marietta," the Victor Herbert-Rida Johnson Young operetta in which Emma Trentini and Orville Harrold originally starred on the stage. "Naughty Marietta" was directed by Mr. Van Dyke.

A Refurbished "Roberta."

Speaking of filmusicals, when "Roberta," RKO-Radio's picturization of the Jerome Kern operetta, opens at RKO-Keith's Theater tomorrow, picturegoers will discover a magnified production that has been lent the charm of artistic and impressive embellishment, an almost complete preservation of the lilting Kern score and a revelation of such expert dancing as the screen never before has witnessed.

If one were to search about for some criticism to level at this diversified entertainment, which was previewed by a hand-picked audience in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday noon, it would be that the action is permitted to slow down a little too much between the musical numbers.

This, I take it, is due to the elimination of a great deal of the wise-cracking comedy from the part created in Max Gordon's Broadway production of the piece by Bob Hope and played here later by Marty May. This is the role of Huckleberry Haines, impersonated on the screen by Fred Astaire.

Astaire Is Versatile.

The agile Mr. Astaire has some funny lines, but not quite enough. However, that is a minor deficiency. If he lacks the ad-libbing humor of the Messrs. Hope and May, they certainly were tenfold more lacking in Fred's proficiency in the dance, his virtuosity at the piano and his easy command of high comedy, as opposed to the smart-aleck brand.

Irene Dunne sings the Kern songs beautifully, in the Tamara role of Stephanie, and Ginger Rogers dances rings around Odette Myrtil and omits most of her predecessor's crass rowdyisms.

And that fashion parade! And that "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" number! And that dance Fred and Ginger do to it! And——

Well, there are intervals during this melodious melange when Mr. Kern and Mrs. Gordon must be convinced that their original work has gone Arabian Nights on them!

And, what's more, it has.

If it's the score of that outdoor game of indoor-baseball you have been worrying about, you ought to be put out of your misery by being told that when the members of the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra, headlining the stage bill at the Earle through today, and Moe Baer's instrumentalists from the Club Habana met on the Ellipse yesterday afternoon, the fracas ended 14 to 12 in favor of the Dorseys.

The game was put on ice by Bing's brother, Bob Crosby, who slammed out a home run with the bases full when it was needed most. With two out in the last inning and the score 14 to 5 in favor of the Dorsey crew, the Baers put on a bear of a rally to score 7 runs and bring the final count up to 14 to 12.

Bill Hoyle, one of this column's most helpful operatives, umpired the battle, which whipped him down to a state of exhaustion where he was hardly able to crawl back to The Post to tell about it.

"Town Hall Tonight."

Tonight on the stage of the Wardman Park Theater, the Drama Guild of Washington will present "The Harbor Light," by Owen Davis.

A large cast of the Capital's foremost resident actors will enact the drama of several generations of a Maine shipbuilding family. The principal parts will be played by Ailene Sanford, Denis E. Connell, Harry A. Wescott, Frances Koonce and Frances Brunt.

"Harbor Light" is under the direction of L. W. Currier and a repeat performance will be given in the same theater tomorow night.

Word to the Wise Note.

Yes, spring was on top yesterday, but I wouldn't take them off yet, if I were you. That robin you saw might turn out to be a starling with a high fever!

Offerings for New Film Week Are Announced

What happens when a timid clerk is mistaken for a desperate criminal is set forth in "The Whole Town's Talking," the fast-moving and exciting comedy-melodrama opening on the Earle screen tomorrow with Edward G. Robinson in the dual role of the clerk, Arthur Jones, and the gangster, "Killer" Mannion. Not only is Jones' life affected, but events stir things up considerably for the girl in the case, impersonated by Jean Arthur. On the stage, the headline attraction will be supplied by the Three Boswell Sisters in their close vocal harmonies and trick song arrangements. Other vaudeville acts will be offered by Henry Gine and Ruth DeQuincy, with Basil Lewis in "Aristocrats of the Waltz;" Frank Gaby in "The Gift of Gab," and the Royal Uyenos. The bill, as usual, will be completed by newsreel and orchestra, with Bert Granoff, tenor, under the baton of Freddie Clark.

• • • •

The long-awaited RKO-Radio picturization of Jerome Kern's "Roberta," with Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in the principal roles, will be presented for the first time in Washington on the screen at RKO-Keith's beginning tomorrow morning. Produced on an elaborate scale and slightly juggling the story of the original Max Gordon stage production, "Roberta," in its new form, still retains all the charm of the Kern music and has the added attraction of the extraordinary dancing of Fred Astaire, both as a solo artist and as partner for Miss Rogers, who has made enormous strides as a danseuse since "Flying Down to Rio." Helen Westley, Randolph Scott, Ferdinand Munier and scores more appear in the supporting roles. A gorgeous fashion show and clever orchestra also contribute importantly to the entertainment. The Bill will be augmented by short-reel subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News.

• • • •

Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery are the co-stellar players in "Vanessa: Her Love Story," which comes to Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow as chief feature of the screen portion of the bill assembled for the new week. The Hugh Walpole story is said to provide a perfect vehicle for the talents of its stars, who are supported by Otto Kruger, May Robson, Lewis S. Stone, Henry Stephenson, Violet Kemble-Cooper and others of note. Another screen feature will be the second release of "The March of Time," scarcely secondary to any film subject, so cleverly contrived are its treatments of significant world happenings. The stage attraction will be the "Casino de Paree Revue," with Milton Berle the chief buffoon, and a bevy of Broadway beauties to add luster to the occasion. Cardini, prestidigitator; Chilton and Thomas, dancers, and many others likewise appear in this gaudy stage show. The bill also will include the Fox Movietone News and orchestral contributions under the direction of Phil Lampkin.

• • • •

"The Woman in Red," Barbara Stanwyck's latest starring vehicle, is announced for the new week at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater. Gene Raymond is the leading man pictured opposite the star. The picture is a screen adaptation of Wallace Irwin's popular novel of "North Shore." Genevieve Tobin, John Eldredge, Nella Walker, Claude Gillingwater and Doris Lloyd also are prominent in the cast.

• • • •

Claudette Colbert, recent winner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' award for the best cinema acting of the year 1934, will occupy the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow, in "The Gilded Lily," in which her new leading man, Fred MacMurray, is said to achieve much the same sort of popular hit scored by Clark Gable, the other academy winner, in "It Happened One Night." The major characters are an office stenographer and a ship-news reporter. C. Aubrey Smith, Donald Meek and Luis Alberni are conspicuously cast.

• • • •

"Power," the Gaumont-British film version of the Lion Feuchtwanger's novel of the same name, has so struck popular fancy at the Belasco Theater that it will be retained as chief feature of the bill through another week, ending with close of business next Wednesday night. Conrad Veidt is the star of the film, supported by Benita Hume, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and other distinguished players. Lothar Mendes directed.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson will present their latest tale of the African jungles on the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater as chief feature of the bill to be shown for the week beginning tomorrow. "Baboona" is the title of this latest epic of the veldt. It is given a touch of novelty by the introduction of aerial sequences that are unusual. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will appear in person with each showing of the film. News events, short sound subjects and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's interesting contributions to the audience's entertainment will round out the bill.

• • • •

Next week at the Gayety Theater, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee, the attraction will be the "Gems of Burlesque" company of burlesquers, headed by Mike Sachs, Billy Lamont, Frank Smith, Earl Root, Alice Kennedy, Floyd Hallicy, Marie Alley and Bobby Gordon. The extra added attractions will be supplied in the attractive persons of Ann La Morriss and Peggy Hill.

• • • •

Chaliapin, "the one and only," as he is known the world over, will give a recital next Sunday night in the National Theater. The great Russian basso will be assisted by Ivan Basilevski, pianist, who will contribute solo numbers. A diversified program is announced by Chaliapin, including the traditional "Song of the Volga Boatmen." Musorgski's "Song of the Flea" and operatic selections ranging from Borondin's "Prince Igor" to Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

Cruickshank-Armour Card 64 to Halt Turnesas in Miami Golf

Rally Erases 3-Up Lead Of Rivals

Ex-Champs Win, 1 Up, on 36th Hole of Initial Match.

Hagen-Farrell Defeated in International 4-Ball Event.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, March 7.—The Turnesa brothers from New York, Joe and Mike, came within a stroke or two of putting the favorites out of the international four-ball golf tournament in today's first round, but finally succumbed, one down on the thirty-sixth green, to Tommy Armour, of Chicago, and wee Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va.

Others in the select field of 16 teams competing for $4,000 in cash prizes also had their troubles before going on to the next round.

Horton Smith, Chicago, and Paul Runyan, New York, ran into Ed Dudley, Philadelphia, and Orville White, St. Louis, when the latter team was hot and Smith finally had to make a 12-footer drop on the thirty-sixth green before his side could claim a 1-up victory.

Burke, Cox Triumph.

The star team of Walter Hagen and Johnny Farrell found more than its equal today in Billie Burke, Cleveland, and Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn. Burke and Cox fired a nice best-ball score of 65 on the morning 18 and went to lunch one up, but were forced to the thirty-fifth this afternoon before they could win, 2 and 1.

Denny Shute, Philadelphia, who cast his lot with Jimmy Hines, Garden City, Long Island, couldn't get past the first round. He and Hines ended their bid one down to Johnny Golden, Noroton, Conn., and Bill Mehlhorn, Louisville.

Gene Sarazen and Harold McSpaden, Kansas City, eliminated the lone Canadian entry, Jules Huot, Quebec, and his partner, Willie Goggin, San Francisco, 4 and 3.

Laffoon, Wood Beaten.

Going into the afternoon round four up, Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., and Willie Klein, Miami, gained another hole on Ky Laffoon, Denver, and Craig Wood and finally ended the match on the fourteenth green with their five-up advantage.

John Revolta, Milwaukee, and Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., nominated by many as the tourney's dark horses, had a comparatively easy time ousting Johnny Kinder and Phil Perkins, Cleveland, 5 and 3.

A 4-and-2 victory over Al Watrous, Detroit, and Frank Walsh, Chicago, carried Willie Macfarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and Harry Cooper, Chicago, into the second round.

Sensational golf was promised tomorrow in matches bringing together the Armour-Cruickshank combination and the Revolta-Picard team and Smith and Runyan and the Golden-Mehlhorn team.

Joe Turnesa Stars.

Joe Turnesa gave the large gallery that followed his foursome what was perhaps the day's greatest thrill after he and Mike made the turn on the morning round 2 down. Using his putter like a magic wand on the homecoming nine, he scored a 31, good enough to send him and his brother to lunch 3 up on their heavily favored opponents.

But Cruickshank had a lot of good golf left in his system. Starting with a birdie on the first hole of the final round, the squat Richmond pro started dropping them from all angles. One of his outstanding accomplishments was an eagle 3 on the 461-yard seventh.

The Wee Scot Fires His First Shot in Miami Tourney

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Ruth on Bench As Regulars Bow, 2-0

5,000 Are Disappointed, Coscarat Slams One for Circuit.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 7.—With Babe Ruth on the sidelines, the Boston Braves regulars were given a 2-0 drubbing by the rookies today in the first practice game of the season.

Joe Coscarart, new infielder from Seattle, led the Yannigan attack with a home run that made even Ruth stare. A crowd of 5,000, which hoped to see the Babe take at least a swing during the impromptu struggle, was disappointed because Manager Bill McKechnie refused to risk his great box-office star.

Giants Beat Students.

Miami, March 7 (AP).—The New York Giants gave a baseball lesson to the students of Max Carey's diamond school today by beating them, 16 to 0, in an exhibition game. Manager Bill Terry started his regulars and kept them in until they scored six runs off Pitcher Manning in the third.

Cub Line-up Indicated.

Avalon, Calif., March 7 (AP).—Rain caused postponement of the first intra-cub game today, but Manager Charlie Grimm gave out its regular line-up which may start the 1935 pennant campaign. The line-up:

Lonnie Warneke probably will hurl the opener of the season.

Card Rookie Stars.

Bradenton, Fla., March 7 (AP).—John T. Winsett, lanky outfielder who batted .356 for the Rochester Club last year, was the outstanding slugger in the camp of the St. Louis Cardinals as they went through their sixth day of spring training today.

Winsett is 6 feet 2½ inches tall and left-handed. He gave an impressive batting demonstration, sending line drives and towering flies to distant parts of the park.

Pepper Martin arrived in camp today and said his injured arm of last season is "as good as new."

Miss Orcutt Is Among Winning Golf Choices

St. Augustine, Fla., March 7 (AP). All favorites came through in the second round of the Florida East Coast Women's Golf tournament today.

Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., continued her stride by eliminating Mrs. J. S. Fuller, St. Augustine, 5 and 4.

Gonzaga and St. John's Clash to Prep Title

Gonzaga Prep and St. John's will meet today at 4 p. m. at George Washington University's gym to decide the District prep school basket ball championship.

Both teams will use their strongest line-ups.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., March 7.

THE only thing incongruous about the guy is his soft, Southern drawl. He's the biggest player in camp here. His big frame, broad chest, ample waist, powerful legs and leonine head breathe ruggedness and he busts the ball farther than any American leaguer except Foxx and Gehrig. Freddie Sington is a big man.

POVICH.

He's down here in Biloxi looking for a job in the Washington outfield after a sensational year at Albany, where he specialized in driving in runs with hits that rocketed over the ramparts of every International League park. The former campus hero of the University of Alabama disarms you instantly, though, when he says with his silken Southern accent, "Ah guess ah'll have plenty competition daown yere."

It's his second trip to the big leagues with the Nats. He was sent packing to Albany when the Washington team broke camp last year, after a dismal failure to strike the batting stride that had made him the leading hitter in the Middle Atlantic League. Manager Joe Cronin didn't like the way he followed through on his swing with only one hand. Apparently, he couldn't hit big-league pitching.

But up at Albany last season, he hit the next best thing—double A league pitching. There wasn't a park in which he didn't smack a home run, and in one game at Albany he lambasted the ball over the fence in all three fields. By the time he had finished the season with a .327 batting average and driven in more runs than anybody in the league, he was the objective of a half-dozen major league scouts.

WHAT I have been meaning to say is that Sington was some pumpkins as a hitter up in Albany. The merchants up there offered cash and merchandise to the players who could slam the ball over the fences for home runs, and the newly married Sington almost furnished his home by his batting feats. A table, radio and various other articles of furniture now decorating his domicile are testimony of his hitting prowess.

"Ah've learned to hit better during the last year," he says.

"That tryout ah had with Washington last year did me a lot of good. Ah thought ah was a hitter when ah led the Middle Atlantic League, but last year ah found out how little ah really knew about hitting. A'course, these pitchers up here are better, ah guess, but ah'm a better batter now, so it kinda evens it up."

Despite his failure last spring at Biloxi, Griffith retained title to Sington, whose type of power hitting the Nats lost when Goose Goslin was traded to Detroit two years ago. So, when Sington started busting the ball for Albany last season, the Nats' owner was vitally interested with an eye to recalling him for service in 1935.

Sington had put in a spell with Griffith's Chattanooga team and Joe Engel had not been inclined to recommend him highly. "He's weak on those high pitches, inside," Engel told Griffith, "and when the pitchers start to slow up on him, they stop him cold." Griffith's liking for Sington thus cooled.

BUT Sington's sensational hitting with Albany soon recaptured Griffith's interest. The Nats' owner consulted Joe Judge, then manager of the Baltimore Orioles, who soon were to meet Albany in a three-game series. "Let me know what you think of Sington," Griffith asked Judge.

"They tell me," Griffith added, "that he has one woeful weakness. He can't hit those high ones inside, and that they can tease him with those slow balls. I'm just telling you so you'll know what to pitch against him."

Griffith met up with Judge in Baltimore the following week. Addressing Griffith with the familiarity born of the 17 years' association on the Washington Club, Judge exploded, "You dirty double-crosser. Whaddayamean, this Sington can't hit those high ones inside. Why, he busted three of 'em out of the park in three days against us.

"And who said he can't hit slow balls, either? You ruined us with your instructions how to pitch to that bird. We tried him on slow ones after he murdered those high ones. He laid that big bat against a ball that was just drooping over the plate and busted it a mile over the fence. Thanks, aheluva lot, and keep your advice to yourself in the future."

Ferrell Hopes To Pitch 20 Victories

Arm Shipshape, Red Sox Hurler Is Ready; His Ailment Mystery.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 7.—In contrast with the uncertainty that still surrounds the pitching future of Robert Moses Grove, there is no hint of a question mark after the name of Wesley Cheek Ferrell.

The pride of the North Carolina Ferrells, discarded a year ago by the Cleveland Indians, has his mandolin in tune and his right arm in shape for a big season with the Boston Red Sox.

"It's twenty games for me in the winning column this year or no count," says Wes. "My arm never felt better. There isn't even a twinge of pain left in my right shoulder, which gave me so much trouble during my last three years with Cleveland and finally forced me out of the box.

"I don't know what cured it. I tried everything, from infra-ray treatments to astrology. Two years ago I thought I was never going to recover but it looks as though I have it licked now. I'll have the old hop back on my fast ball this year."

Ferrell's comeback, if it attains the proportions he expects, will be one of the most remarkable in recent years. After winning 91 games for Cleveland in four consecutive seasons from 1929 to 1932, his arm began to show the effects of a shoulder ailment that developed suddenly in 1931. The trouble was never definitely diagnosed. He was never quite sure whether it was muscular or something deeper-rooted.

He dieted, had some teeth pulled, his tonsils extracted and submitted to all sorts of treatments. He laughs about it now but he even consulted fortune-tellers and the stars in the hope of shaking his jinx.

"I won over 20 games in 1931 and 1932 with an arm that I could seldom raise over my shoulder," he says. "Then I started to skid. I tried the outfield. My salary was cut two-thirds and I was ready to quit for good. Then I was traded to the Red Sox and my luck turned."

Ferrell's recovery last season was such that, despite a late start in June, he turned in 14 victories against only 5 defeats. He didn't show his old-time speed but he had control.

He is only 27 years old now and looks as though he had just stepped out of college, but he's a veteran of eight years' experience.

Finney Gets 5 Hits At Macks' Camp

Making Strong Bid for Regular Berth.

By the Associated Press.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 7.—Lou Finney, holdover outfielder, served notice in no uncertain terms today that Connie Mack will have to give him due consideration in the Philadelphia Athletics varsity.

Performing at first base for the training camp "Yannigans" in the last camp game before the A's start the interclub exhibition series tomorrow, Finney hammered out five straight hits and scored three runs.

Hatter Impressive.

Lakeland, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Clyde Hatter, a southpaw, who came up to the Detroit Tigers for a tryout, worked his fast ball in a four-inning practice game today, and might have won if the infield and outfield had not been composed almost entirely of pitchers.

Gomez in Camp.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 7 (AP). Vernon (Goofy) Gomez, now the highest-paid major league pitcher, made his first appearance of the season at the Yankees' drill today. Gomez took things easy in his first workout, and the day's honors went to Earl Combs, who did some flashy fly snaring in the outfield.

LEXINGTON, Va., March 7.—Eastern High added Charlotte of North Carolina to its long list of conquests here tonight as easily as if she were so many Southern damsels of that name and sailed blithely into the second round of the twelfth annual Washington and Lee interscholastic basket ball tournament on the wings of a 47-to-20 victory.

The confident crew from the Capital lost no time in giving some 800 fans in the university's Doremus gymnasium the most impressive demonstration of how basket ball should be played than they had seen all day in the other five games put together.

Led by poker-faced Lavelle (Dope) Dean and lanky Chick Hollidge, the Lincoln Parkers swept up and down the court with a scoring attack which had the Carolina high school buried beneath a 13-to-4 lead in the first quarter, which grew heavier as the game progressed.

Faces John Marshall.

Eastern will meet John Marshall High, of Richmond, at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow. The Washington team defeated the Justices, 34 to 24, earlier in the season at Richmond.

The victory of the Lincoln Parkers gave the Washington area two representatives among the eight surviving teams. Bethesda-Chevy Chase High had already entered the second round with a flashy 29-to-28 victory over Augusta Military Academy in the afternoon in which young Ed Johnson, son of the great Walter Johnson, lifted the Marylanders to victory in the last five minutes of play.

The pairings for the second round tomorrow:

Massanutten Military vs. Jefferson High, of Roanoke, 3:30 p. m.
Tech High, of Atlanta, vs. Spartanburg (S. C.) High, 4:30 p. m.
Eastern vs. John Marshall, of Richmond, 7:30 p. m.
Bethesda-Chevy Chase vs. Staunton Military, 8:30 p. m.

Stands Out From Start.

Young Johnson was the standout of the Bethesda-Augusta from the start to finish. While the Bethesda teamwork was smooth and even, it was Capt. Johnson who was the keyman of the floor game and the leader of the scoring drive with 10 points. Bob Harris, shifty little forward, took a share of the individual honors of the hectic finish by dropping in the basket which made the score 29-24 and proved to be the margin of victory.

Joe Keegin, former Eastern High football and baseball star, made his appearance in a basket ball suit for Augusta, playing at a guard position throughout.

But defense other than the best Keegin and his teammates could offer was needed against the flashy attack of the Marylanders. They furnished the most impressive demonstration of the afternoon, not excepting the two State championship teams which played.

Takes Early Lead.

Bethesda took a 9-to-7 lead in the first quarter, but Augusta had wiped it out by the end of the half and the teams went into the third quarter on even terms, with the score 18 to 18. Petey Jackson, who tallied 18 points for the losers, was providing the Cadets with most of their power. His two baskets helped put the Virginians in the lead, 22 to 21, going into the final quarter.

Jackson lengthened the lead to 24-21, but Frank Lozupone cut it two points with a long shot for Bethesda. Then Johnson broke through, dribbled half the length of the floor and put Bethesda in the lead, 25 to 24, with five minutes to go.

Jackson missed a snow-bird after Bethesda had displayed a pretty ball-freezing game and Johnson widened the lead with a perfect set shot from the side with a minute to play. Harris dropped in a long one for 29-24 and Gallagher made two foul shots for 29-26. Jackson cut the advantage to 29 to 28, but Grills of the Cadets missed some long shots and it was young Johnson who grabbed the ball off the

Oklahoma U. Bids For Biff Jones

By the United Press.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 7.—Malcolm Rosser, jr., of the University of Oklahoma Board of Regents, today was reported at Baton Rouge, La., to have offered Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones an attractive salary as coach of the Oklahoma football team.

Jones, former coach at West Point, who resigned as coach at Louisiana State after an argument with Senator Huey Long, recently declined an offer of the Oklahoma coaching job.

Rosser, however, was reported able to offer the maximum salary allowed by the university, which is $5,200, and $2,300 more to be underwritten by a person interested in Sooner athletics.

Griffith to Add Two Farms To Chain

By a Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 7.—Disappointed by the failure to organize the Southeastern League, in which he would sponsor the Selma club, Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington team, has decided to extend his farm system even farther.

By arrangements with Joe Cambria, owner of the Albany club, with which the Nats have a working agreement, the Washington owner will buy an interest in the Harrisburg club, of the NYPA League, and the Lancaster club, of the Penn State League. He will have first claim to the players on these teams.

Five Minor Farms.

Griffith thus will have five minor league farms: Chattanooga, his chief source of supply, in the Southern Association; Albany, of the International League; Panama City, of the Florida State League, and Harrisburg and Lancaster.

The Harrisburg and Lancaster clubs are slated to share with Chattanooga the surplus of young pitching talent now with the Nats.

Griffith had guaranteed to meet half the pay roll of the Selma club and provide the team with players in exchange for first call on their services.

Sington Hits Ball to All Corners

Begins Drive for Job by Outdistancing Pokes of Powell.

Slams Pitches of Both Veterans and Rookies in Practice.

By Shirley L. Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 7.—The mahogany-brown bat of Freddie Sington spoke in convincing tones this afternoon and sounded the start of a long-drawn battle for an outfield berth with the Nats.

Biloxi's "most unusual" rain spell had continued throughout the morning and confined the Nats to their hotel lobby, where First Baseman Joe Kuhel entertained with his growing repertoire of card tricks, but this afternoon Manager Bucky Harris shooed the boys out to the stadium for batting drill.

The giant Sington, a 210 pounder, broad of chest and wide of girth, had arrived in camp only a few hours before in company with Third Baseman Cecil Travis, but once on the field he lost little time in demonstrating the hitting prowess that made him a star with Albany last year.

Outdistance Powell's.

Off both veteran and rookie pitchers, Sington pounded the ball to all corners of the field, his drives outdistancing by far those of Powell, his Albany teammate of last year who is his chief rival for a regular berth in the Nats' outfield.

Cliff Bolton and Sammy Holbrook also were meeting the ball squarely, Bolton's straight-away hitting winning the approving comment of Manager Bucky Harris, but none could ride the ball as far as Sington, who last year hit home runs in every park in the International League.

Threaten Schulte.

With Bucky Harris seeking added hitting power in his outfield, both Sington and Powell are threatening to displace Fred Schulte. Thus far it has been obvious that Powell

Ruth May Face Dizzy 25 Times This Season; Gallico Would Pay Off on .260—So Might Babe

By Paul Gallico.
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Jay Hanner Dean, which is the right name of Jerome Herman Dean, otherwise known as Dizzy, is sorry that he popped off about Babe Ruth and instructed Alan Gould, Associated Press sports editor, to convey his apologies. This looks very much as though that smart young newspaperman from St. Louis who looks after Dizzy whenever he can, caught up with Dizzy again and told him not to be silly.

There are two reasons why it is a bad idea for a pitcher, even a great one, to insult Babe Ruth. The first is that it isn't polite, and the second is that some day just when the pitcher needs a ball game, that same Ruth might step up to the plate swinging an ugly wooden bludgeon and knock said ball game right out of the inclosure. He has done it before. He will be able to do it as long as he can be wheeled up to the rubber and propped up at the plate.

Ruth will hit Dean all right, when they meet, but he won't hit him as much as he might have ten years ago. It is more than a pity that those two superlative athletes have been kept apart by years. A league with a young Dean pitching and a young Ruth hitting would have made for many a sensational sport story. About all it is good for now except color and laughs is fireside discussion. In his day Ruth has hit against some pretty good pitchers. He used to have to stand at the plate when Walter Johnson and Lefty Grove were burning them in, and his record shows that many a time the ball never reached the hands of the catcher—was, in fact, never seen again.

Now, I don't intend to get into an argument whether Dean is a better pitcher than were Grove and Johnson. I suspect that he is, but if you don't think so I won't debate it, because you know more than I do about it. I'm just a young feller who never had a peek at a real good old-timer. But I certainly had an eyeful of that Dean against those Detroit sluggers last year and I was satisfied. But how I would have liked to see the Ruth of 1923 or 1924 against the Diz of today.

The Braves will meet the Cardinals 22 times this year, 11 times at each city. This means that Dizzy will face Ruth no more than an average of five or six times this

Bright Haven Annexes Hialeah's Sprint Feature in 1:10 4-5

Golden Fate, Favorite, Is Second

Wright Rides His Fifth 'Triple' of Meeting, Pilots 3 Straight.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., March 7. The Sage Stable's Bright Haven ran as fast a 6 furlongs as any horse at the meeting to hang up his third straight triumph in the Graded Handicap Class "B," which featured the card here today. Bobby Merritt, who is slated to ride Morpluck in Saturday's Florida Derby, broke the 4-year.old son of Bright Knight—Rock Haven on top and the $7.20-for-$2 shot never faltered, scoring by a length and a half in 1:10 4-5.

Golden Fate, representing Elwood Sachsenmaier, son of the late William Sachsenmaier, who recently died of a heart attack, forced all the pace and saved the place by a length from the Arden Farm's Quel Jeu. The latter got up in the last stride to head Night Sprite out of the picture. Technique trailed far back all the way to complete the field of five. Golden Fate, with Coucci up, was favorite.

Dominate the Running.

Bright Haven and Golden Fate dominated the running throughout. The latter made a threatening challenge after turning into the home lane, but Merritt had plenty of horse under him. Bright Haven drawing clear again the last sixteenth. Night Sprite, unable to catch the leaders, held on well under Wayne Wright but succumbed to Quel Jeu's belated bid right near the finish line.

Wayne Wright rode three winners for the day and it was his fifth "triple" of the meeting.

Playful Tour, with the battle-scarred Jimmy Burke as his pilot, won his first purse in the juvenile 3-furlong test that ushered in today's program. The colt broke very fast and drew clear of the 13 other youngsters but he had to be hard ridden to win by a half length from Sandy Beach.

About the most mediocre field of maiden platers of the season performed in the second dash of six furlongs. It required 1:14 for Sock Dologer, the $6.50 choice, to get home. Secret Lover, paying $58.20 for place, finished a length back and the same distance before Glistening. Sock Dologer took an early lead and won well in hand.

Dancing Cloud Scores.

Dancing Cloud, one that has been knocking at the door, broke through with an easy victory under Georgie Watson's guidance in the third. Epical was favorite and just lasted to save second money from the slow-starting Bay Sister.

M. L. Schwartz's filly Good Gamble, a disappointment in her recent Florida debut, made no mistakes in the 7 furlongs of the fourth, a dash for 3-year-olds exclusively. Wayne Wright, who hardly ever goes a day without winning at least one race, used new tactics with the Schwartz Miss today, rating her just off Pass Up's early pace instead of letting the $3.20 choice sprint far out in front, as Earl Porter did the filly's other local effort.

Wright rode his second odds-on winner of the day in the sixth. The blond Idaho boy conducted Golden Way first to the wire by more than a length, the combination returning $3.60.

Wright, who has the local jockey leadership cinched, also won astride Capt. Jerry in the last race. The Captain won by a length and a half from Mintana to pay $12.90 and give Wright his forty-first score at this track. Calgary Kay was third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOD GAMBLE, $3.20, $2.50, $2.40; FAST STRIDE, $3.40, $2.80; SULA, $3.90.

GOOD GAMBLE was allowed to rate along back of the pace, came to the far turn, where she was sent to the front, drew away, and won nicely in hand. FAST STRIDE, slow to get up to her stride, closed with a rush in run through stretch. SULA moved up very fast and ran a good race. HOWS CHANCES broke last and had to make up a world of ground. SUN REVERIE ran a fair race. PASS UP had plenty of speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Graded Handicap "B." Purse, $1,000. A handicap for 4-year-olds and upward of B division. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:37½. Off at 4:40. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT HAVEN, $7.20, $3.30, $2.60; GOLDEN FATE, $3.10, $2.40; QUEL JEU, $2.50.

BRIGHT HAVEN, in good form, broke very fast, was sent to the front and, rated along, saved ground and held race safe. GOLDEN FATE was a keen factor from the start and ran a game race. QUEL JEU, slow to get into his stride, made up ground gradually and finished with a rush. NIGHT SPRITE displayed good speed, but was tired in the stretch. TECHNIQUE was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:11½. Winner, W. N. Adrians' br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN WAY, $3.80, $2.90, $2.40; BIG SHOW, $5.90, $3.40; OLD JUDGE, $3.30.

GOLDEN WAY ran as if much the best. He was rated along to the far turn, ran into lead around turn, drew away, but at the end boy was easing him up. BIG SHOW was hard ridden the last half-mile, but was no match for the winner. OLD JUDGE had early speed, but dropped to last place, then came again. PRINCE POMPEY had speed for six furlongs. BOOMS PAL failed to show any speed.

Stewart's Beats Silver Spring Merchants in Tourney, 36-29

George's Five Turns Back Fort Hunt

Northeast Boys Club Is Awarded Forfeit Over Thompson.

STEWART'S PHARMACY and George's Radio, two unlimited teams well trained in the art of passing and shooting, forged into the second round of the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament sponsored by The Washington Post last night at Tech High gym.

Winner of more than 35 games this season, Stewart's showed too much scoring power for a game Silver Spring Merchants team, and blasted the hopes of the Montgomery County stars, 36 to 29, in a well-played and swift-moving contest.

George's Radio, grabbing an early lead and maintaining it throughout, eliminated the Fort Hunt C. C. C. team, 47 to 23.

The curtain-raiser, scheduled between Northeast Boys Club and Thompson School, both 145-pound challengers, went to the Clubbers via the forfeit route when the school team failed to show up.

Sholl's to Make Debut in Tourney

Faces Marine Barracks at Tech Gym Tonight.

Sholl's, 1932-33 unlimited champion, will open its fight to regain its laurels in the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament under sponsorship of The Washington Post tonight at Tech High's gym in a game with the Marine Barracks team.

Recent conqueror of Bureau of Investigation in a spectacular overtime battle, Sholl's will present virtually the same team that reached the third round of the National A. A. U. tournament in Kansas last winter.

The game with the Marines will start at 9:30.

Four 145-pound teams will furnish plenty of fireworks. Bovello Plumbers, 1934 130-pound champions, a team good enough to bowl over some of your best unlimited teams, will engage the Agriculture Flashes at 7:30. At 8:30 St. Martin's, a recklessly aggressive band of high and prep stars, will take on the Democratic Club of Falls Church.

The new 'Queen" had two covey finds and a like number of singles in an outstanding 30-minute run-off heat to climax a class performance in a three-hour heat on the opening day.

Clemmer's Dog Is Winner in Field Trials

Keen Competition Marks Rappahannock Event; Officers Elected.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., March 7.—First honors in the puppy trials of the Rappahannock Valley Field Trial Association conducted at Lavue, estate of H. O. Swanson, near this city today, went to Carioca, young puppy owned and handled by Capt. R. H. Clemmer, of Waynesboro, Va.

Giving Carioca a stiff race for the honor was Phil Baird, property of Capt. N. D. Woodward, of Baltimore, which was given second place by the judges. Ginger Girlie, owned by Col. G. D. Richardson, of Weedonville, Va., placed third.

Judges Charles B. Cooke, of Mount Holly, Va., and Irvin A. Hynes, of Baltimore, declared the event one of the most outstanding in Virgina field trial annals.

Show Real Form.

All of the bird finders measured far beyond the average in ability and seven were called from the 10 braces run to perform again. Sandy McPherson, jr., and Alleghany Bacon Rind, owned by Capt. Clemmer; Misty Sue, property of J. W. King, Richmond, and Alleghany Nell, of Capt. Clemmer's lot, were among the seven that just missed winning one of the three honors.

At a meeting of the association last night, G. D. Richardson, of Dahlgren, was elected president; C. B. Carmichael, Fredericksburg; J. W. Dorsey Cooke, Potomac Beach, Va., and L. L. Stevens, Quantico, Va., vice presidents; and Leo V. Timberlake, of Fredericksburg, secretary-treasurer. The board of directors will consist of Emmett R. Colbert, Marshall King, Jesse Burgess, E. C. Meade and H. O. Swanson.

The annual fall trials of the association will be held October 28 and 29.

North Carolina, Duke Seen Track Favorites

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 7.—Although Maryland and Virginia will offer strong entries in the sixth annual Southern Conference indoor games here Saturday, the race for honors is now regarded by many observers as a Carolina-Duke affair.

Leading performers from last year are back to represent both teams, and Duke has the advantage of its brilliant sophomore performers. The night program will begin at 7:15 and will follow trials, semifinals and a few finals beginning at 1:30 p. m.

Two Brooms, at $23.40, Winner by Six Lengths

New Orleans, March 7 (AP).—Two Brooms, a 4-year-old owned by G. Cruise, ran away from his field in the mile feature at the Fair Grounds today.

Taking the track at the start of the race, the son of Brooms increased his advantage at every post and finished with six lengths to spare. C. J. Bild's veteran campaigner, Ned O., was second followed by B. C. Spotts' Lady Rockledge. Two Brooms paid $23.40.

Speed Record Is Broken by Campbell

gassed him as exhaust flames flicked at his legs. Then he was nearly thrown from the car on a test run in which he hit a one-way speed of 270. Today it was one gigantic swerve, and his tires.

He stood and stared in amazement at the racing cords on old Bluebird as he looked the car over in front of the timing tower when it was all over. The rubber surface of all six tires—two on front, four on back—was literally burned away. The casings hung in shreds, like strips of torn burlap. There were parts of the tires that were within a couple of plies of being torn away straight down to the inner tubes.

"The run down was splendid," said Campbell as he posed for the cameramen, laughing and talking to Lady Campbell.

Ran Back "Terrible."

"But coming back," he said, "was simply terrible. The beach, through 6 miles at the south end, was very rough. I had to get up speed there. So I simply tread her down to the floor and held on. I could feel the tires going, but was all right until just after I left the measured mile. Then I hit a huge bump, the wheels wrenched over, and I thought I was gone.

"It was terrifically close. Just as the left wheels got up to where they seemed to be touching the soft sands, she came back again, and everything was all right."

Campbell said he had hurt both wrists pulling the car back, but was otherwise all right.

In all he broke four world speed records today.

In addition to the 1 mile, he set a record average of 276.160 for 1 kilometer, 268.474 for 5 kilometers, and 251.396 for 5 miles.

For fear of failure, Campbell again hid his record attempt in an announcement of his last-minute decision to run, saying that he was merely going out to test tire pressures and shock absorbers, and would not attempt to go fast.

Throng Holds Breath.

"Remember," he told the newspapermen as he trundled Bluebird to the beach, "I'm not going to go fast."

He was off at a few minutes after 4 p. m., starting 2,000 feet atbove the amusement pier that crossed the course near the start, and was gliding along at close to 150 miles an hour when he shot into third speed and gave her the gun. The sun was pouring down, drying the sand to cement hardness, and the course seemed beautifully smooth. With scarcely any effort, Bluebird soared along as the growl of her motors rose in pitch to a roar, then to an ear-crashing thunder. After 3 full miles on the way down, he was hitting 242.079, after 4 he was going 262.390, as he lit into the measured mile.

The great throng held its breath as Campbell came shooting through the measured mile, the sun glinting on Bluebird, making her look like a streak of blue light hugging the edge of the blue sea.

Exceeds the Record.

Campbell was gone in a flash, only the thunder of his motors echoing and rolling behind, and then came the announcement of the timers:

"Sir Malcolm has exceeded the record south. His average, 272.727."

He had gone through the measured mile, going south in exactly 13.20 seconds, just .03 seconds swifter than the average for the old record. Then he changed tires. In a bit less than half an hour he was on his way back.

The smoothness of his south run was gone as he rocketed north. He was jouncing, bumping, but the airplane straps he wore over his shoulders, holding him down in the seat, kept him from flying out. There was a 15-mile-an-hour southeast breeze on Bluebird's tail.

He was booming and bouncing as he flashed into, through, then out of the measured mile in 13.005 seconds, an average of 281.030 miles an hour, the fastest he or any other man ever has gone on land.

The swerve that nearly got him, after he had reached his great speed, came down the course where spectators were few. But his wheel tracks showed how close he had been. Had the left wheels of the car whirled but once without traction in that soft going, he never would have known of his latest triumph.

The general opinion tonight was that Campbell will have another go at it before returning to England. The beach is due for steady improvement now, with tides running higher daily toward the maximum at the middle of the month. And he said some time ago:

"I'll never be happy until I do 300."

Inter-Suburban School Loop May Be Disbanded Next Year

THE future of the Intersuburban League, whose basket ball season just completed was a success in every respect, is seriously threatened, plans for spring sports and extension of the league next year are imperiled and the entire league may be disbanded.

The schools, although all play each other but Silver Spring and Hyattsville in baseball, will not play on an official basis, and the track meet will not materialize. Football and soccer conflict in the fall between the member schools making a league impossible, and Silver Spring and Alexandria probably will not enter court teams next year.

Alexandria is contemplating entering the class "A" Virginia league, which probably would mean that Coach Givens would withdraw his team from the Intersuburban League. The 1936 Silver Spring basket ball schedule fails to include all of the schools in the league.

W. A. Richardson, of Washington and Lee, president, is anxious to have the league carry on and wants to sign Falls Church and Bethesda to increase its membership. Both schools look favorably upon the idea, but nothing is definite this year and the court season prospects are rather discouraging to the supporters.

Duke Plays Host Today To Tankmen, Courtmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Durham, N. C., March 7.—Two big events, preliminaries of the fifth annual Southern conference swimming meet and a post season basket ball game with Navy, give Duke University its most attractive sports card of the year tomorrow.

Seven institutions are sending around 80 men to this year's meet, which makes it the largest conference aquatic meet since the split in the loop's ranks. Schools entering teams are Washington and Lee, Virginia, Maryland, Clemson, V. P. I., Virginia and Duke.

has been rated by both Harris and Clark Griffith as the likeliest to succeed, but with the team absolutely devoid of sluggers of Sington's type, a place would be readily made open for him if he proves his caliber against big league pitching.

Powell outhit Sington by more than 20 points last year at Albany, where he batted in the lead-off role, and has demonstrated in the batting drills here that he meets the ball frequently, although his drives do not contain a deal of power.

Pitcher Jack Russell will go house-hunting when the club reaches Washington in April. Mrs. Russell is anticipating motherhood in midsummer.

So eager is he to observe likely looking rookies under fire that Manager Harris plans to use the young pitchers almost exclusively in the Nats' training games which will start next week. Reese Diggs, Archie Scrivener, Henry Coppola and Frank Peticolas will get their first test against the Albany team, which is training at nearby Gulfport.

Cecil Travis bears the distinction of being the only bachelor among the regulars on the Washington Club, batterymen excepted.

The continued silence of Pitcher Walter Stewart, who has been placed on the trading block as a result of his refusal to accept terms, finds Owner Griffith unworried.

"We were not depending to much extent on Stewart this season," he said. "But I want to be lenient with him. If he were a younger pitcher I would submit him an even lower offer than my last, but he has only a year or two more in the big leagues and I do not care to be known as the man who forced him out of baseball."

Navy Courtmen Leave To Play Duke, W. & M.

The players making the trip are Fred (Buzz) Borries, Dusty Dornin, Bob Mandelkorn, Carl Fellows, R. J. Badger, Frank Shamer, R. F. Ruge, Lou Robertshaw, Tommy King, G. R. Whitmyer, Sweeney and Krogh.

Massanutten Victor.

The tournament was baptized with a big upset in Massanutten's 21-to-10 victory over Raleigh, champions of North Carolina. The Woodstock, Va., Cadets, twice beaten this season by Staunton, were given only an outside chance of toppling the Carolinians. It was a runaway from the start, Massanutten taking a 10-5 lead in the first half.

Sammy Bowers, a Martinsburg, W. Va., boy, whose 15 points raised his point total for the year to 251 in 17 games, was the only scorer for the Cadets from the floor in the first three periods. His seven baskets provided virtually all of the 15-to-6 lead which the winners held at the end of the third period.

The second game, a thriller, found Tech High School, of Atlanta, Ga., State champions, coming from behind in the last ten seconds of play to win, 27 to 25, from Greenbrier Academy, of Lewisburg, W. Va.

Georgians Tie Score.

The Georgians were trailing, 25 to 23, in the dying moments, but a fast pass to Pete Tinsley, Tech forward, allowed him to score from under the basket and tie the count. Fleming, of Greenbrier, fouled him on the shot and as Tinsley's free shot attempt bounced off the rim, Don Sisk, big center, tossed it in for the winning points as the game ended.

Staunton qualified to meet Bethesda with a decisive 30-to-18 victory over High Point. Bliss, three-sports star of the Cadets, accounted for 17 points from his left guard position. The score at half-time was 14 to 5.

Bookmaking Hit In Maryland Bill

Washington County Would Be Affected.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 7.—The judiciary committee of the House of Delegates today had before it a measure outlawing bookmaking in Washington County.

Delegate Joseph B. Griesacker (Democrat), of Fifth Baltimore, chairman of the committee, said the group would study the bill carefully and might decide to refer it back to the county delegation.

The entire county delegation cooperated in sponsoring the bill. It simply strikes the name of Washington County from the list of counties which are now exempted from the State-wide law prohibiting bookmaking and betting on horse races.

Maryland Golf Amateur to Five Farms

Event Slated June 19-22, Week of Southern in Richmond.

THE Maryland State amateur golf championship, won for the past two years by Indian Spring's Roger Peacock, will be played at Five Farms course June 19-22, the week of the Southern amateur in Richmond, and a week before the Middle Atlantic at Virginia Beach.

This definite information was divulged yesterday in the schedule of 15 events announced from headquarters of the Maryland State Golf Association in Baltimore. Such announcement is expected to irk the Richmond branch of the Southern Association no end, inasmuch as the Manor Club only recently changed its invitation dates to avoid a conflict with the big Dixie championship.

Five of the Maryland State events will be held on District courses. The Maryland Open, which has been in Al Houghton's custody for the last three years, has been awarded to Washington, with indications that it will be played at Kenwood, home course of the champion.

Indian Spring and Manor will be the scene, of handicap tournaments, while Columbia will be host in the annual mixed-two ball event.

The women's championship, won by Helen Dettweiler, will take place at Rolling road, June 4-8.

Team match competition will be held September 29, October 6, 13 and 20. Manor is the defending champion.

The schedule:

April 24—Handicap at Five Farms.
May 8—Handicap at Indian Spring.
May 17—Women's handicap at Elkridge.
June 4 to 8—Women's championship at Rolling Road.
June 5—Handicap at Rolling Road.
June 17—Junior championship at Rolling Road.
June 19 to 22—Amateur championship at Five Farms.
July 16—Mixed two ball at Columbia.
July 17—Handicap at Hillendale.
August 21—Handicap at Manor.
September 13—Women's handicap at Indian Spring.
September 18—Seniors championship at Green Spring Valley.
September 25—Handicap at Rodgers Forge.

Date for Puppy Trial Is Set by Kennel Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 7.—The Western Maryland Kennel Club has set Sunday, June 16, as the date for the third annual puppy trial at the Cumberland Fair Grounds. The committee in charge comprises Chester A. Wolfe, chairman; E. J. Hayes, M. W. Wonn, of Romney, W. Va., and R. E. Beall.

Clifton D. Jeffries and J. George Smith, the committee named to investigate the advisability of staging whippet races under the floodlights at Fairgo during the week of July 4, reported the outlook was favorable toward staging dog races here provided the necessary funds are raised. Ruth and Dizzy Duel to Bear Watching year as a starting pitcher. He may go in three or four times more as a relief pitcher. Counting an average of four times at bat in a full game, and perhaps once or twice against relief pitching, if Ruth gets 25 licks against Dean this season it will be about tops. I will make it a point to keep track of Ruth's average, not only against Jerome, btu also against Paul, in this forthcoming fascinating duel between Babe Ruth and the family Dean.

The office baseball expert figures that Ruth will hit the Deans for an average of .280, but it seems to me that he is high. I will settle for .260, and I suspect so might Master Ruth if three or four of those hits leave the inclosure at crucial moments. Diz is betting that Ruth won't hit a home run off him in the first four times at bat, passes not to count. That crack about passes makes one wonder. It couldn't be that Dean ever intends to give an old gentleman like Ruth an intentional pass. If Dean will just withdraw his apology and insult the Babe all over again, I will take that bet. I remember there were a couple of pitchers on the Chicago Cubs one world series who got Babe mad by referring to his ancestors, his personal habits and his general appearance. It cost them the world series.

Of course, it is one thing for Dean to fool the eager, straining, tense Detroit batsmen as he did in the last World Series against the Tigers. Hank Greenberg, the big Tiger slugger wound up as the Dean's personal stooge in that contest, but this Ruth is something else. He can't be figured. On one pitch he will look like an amateur, missing a curve ball by 2 feet, and spinning around until his legs look like twisted rubber bands. And the next time he will hit that same curve right into the pocket of some little boy on the outside of the park. Hitters like that are bad medicine.

There is another little duel this season that I will not miss, and that is Babe Ruth versus a fellow named Hubbell. Hubbell worked a great humiliation against the Babe by striking him out swinging in front of a vast audience during last summer's All-Star game. The fact that Babe was one of a distinguished quintet of American League sluggers who did the same thing does not count. The Babe, like all elephants, has a memory for an injury, and I suspect he will be able to persuade McKechnie to let him play on the days that Hubbell pitches. Whe-e-e, I can't wait.

Naomi Clark Scores 139 Points for Season.

Cumberland, Md., March 7.—Miss Naomi Clark, of Bruce High School, Westernport, and William (Red) Miller, of Allegany High School, are the leading scorers of the girls' and boys' divisions of the Western Maryland Interscholastic League, which has concluded the 1935 season.

Miss Clark, with 139 points, finished in the fore of Regina Conway, of Beall High. Fannabelle Smith, of Allegany High, took third place with 125 points.

Miller garnered 71 field goals and 11 out of 22 free throws to lead the boys' circuit with 153 points. Runner-up honors went to Johnny Meyers, Central High guard, who chalked up 147 points, while Joe Kelley, LaSalle forward, was third with 139 points.

One of the outstanding features in the boys' loop was the accurate foul shooting of Tommy Stakem, forward of LaSalle, who established and all-time record for the county league by sinking 32 out of 41 free throws for an average of .780.

Stocks Higher; Gains Slight; Trading Small

Am. T. & T. and Sears, Roebuck Are Leaders in Upturn.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 7.—Financial markets today stopped yesterday's slide, but their progress back up the hill was only modest. Leading equities were mostly higher, but gains, with a few exceptions, were fractional. The foreign exchange market quieted down, and the dollar firmed moderately against the pound sterling and continental gold units.

Sentiment in regard to the longer term future of the dollar was still confused today, but following Washington denials of any immediate intention of cutting another wedge out of the currency unit's gold content, Wall street cirlces apparently concluded that both the hopes and fears expressed yesterday had at least been premature.

There was a return of the general disposition to take a sideline's position on the part of many traders. Volume on the stock exchange sank back to the comparatively small total of 536,303 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks moved up .3 of a point to 36.7, with the 30 industrials exhibiting the best tone with a rise of .6 of a point to 52.2.

Among the few leaders able to advance a point or a little more were American Telephone at 106 and Sears-Roebuck at 33½. Most of the rises were limited to minor fractions to ¾ of a point or so.

Grain Market Turns Upward

Cotton Trading Quiet With Prices Closing 1 to 3 Points Up.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 7.—Stimulated in notable degree by advices that, although dollar devaluing would be shunned, the Washington Administration strongly favored higher prices, grains today moved steadily uphill.

It was emphasized commodity prices were yet 20 per cent below the 1926 level. There was conspicuous absence of the tumultuous selling that late yesterday plunged values down. Trade authorities looked for another sharp reduction of the United States wheat visible supply total Monday next.

Wheat closed strong at virtually the day's top quotations, ⅞ to 1⅜ above yesterday's finish, May 96@96¼; corn, ¾ to 1¼ up; May, 83¼@83⅝; oats ⅛ to ¾ advance, and provisions 2 cents to 22 cents down.

Corn and oats were governed in the main by sympathy with wheat. It was unofficially estimated that farm disappearance of corn October 1 to March 1 has been 58.7 per cent of the total farm supply, compared with the 1927-1930 average of 57.2 per cent.

Provisions reflected hog market downturns.

Substitution of Managed Currencies for Orthodox Gold Basis Gains Support Abroad as Best Method of Correcting Erratic Fluctuations.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 7.—There is growing interest abroad, particularly in countries of the sterling area, in the possibility of a general demonetization of gold and the substituton for the gold standard of a system of managed currencies. This school of thought is in diametrical opposition to what remains the more generally accepted and orthodox view that only through restoration of the gold standard can erratic currency fluctuations be ended and permanent international monetary stability be restored.

The thought of demonetizing gold, so long the standard money of most of the civilized world, seems startling at first blush. However, closer analysis will reveal that gold has already been demonetized to a far greater extent than most people realize. In all countries gold has ceased to be a medium of exchange and has disappeared from active circulation. Since the war, and more especially during the depression, the use of gold reserve as a basis for the Nation's credit structure, and as a regulator of the expansion and contraction of money and credit, has been largely curtailed. In fact, it can be said that no central bank at this time is being guided to any major degree in formulating its internal credit policies by the amount of its gold reserves.

Most monetary thinkers, especially those of the "liberal" persuasion, now agree that it is feasible to abolish the use of gold reserves as the basis of a nation's currency and credit system, provided the management of the central bank of a country is competent and independent of domination by political or special interests. On the other hand, there is far less agreement that it is possible to keep currencies of different nations in a stable relationship to each other without the use of some common denominator like gold, the one commodity that has proved at all satisfactory for this purpose over a period of years. However, owing to the disruption of the balance of international payments of most countries, even gold has not proved satisfactory for this purpose.

Settlements by Gold Curtailed in Depression.

The use of gold in settling marginal international transactions, and thus permitting the parity of various currencies to be maintained, has been curtailed sharply in the depression period.

On the other hand, the successful practical operation of the sterling bloc i held to prove conclusively that it is possible to establish an international currency system on a workable basis without the use of gold as a standard.

Proponents of the gold standard argue that there can be no lasting stability of foreign exchanges unless currencies are made convertible into a fixed amount of gold, and unless gold is then made freely available for export to settle international balances. The managed currency school, on the other hand, contends that the role now played by gold in maintaining the stability of exchange rates can be better performed by the use of foreign balances for this purpose by central banks. Thus, the Scandinavian countries have maintained a relatively stable relationship between their currencies and sterling for the past few years through the purchase and sale of sterling exchange. It may be argued, of course, that in case the balance of international payments of a country should become adverse, its foreign balances would become depleted and its currency would then of necessity depreciate.

In discussing the future role of gold in the world's monetary systems, Prof. Gustav Cassel recently stated, "Should the whole world agree to a system of paper currencies, the demand for gold for purposes of monetary policy would die down, and the adjustment of the international balance of payment would then presumably encounter no real difficulty." The Swedish econonmist, one of the leading "liberals" among monetary thinkers, has disparaged the idea that an international old standard is needed because shipments of gold alone can make up deficits in the balance of international payments of a country's balances maintained in any economically strong country can be used with similar effect, he argues.

McKenna Favors Managed Currency.

Similarly, Reginald McKenna, chairman of the powerful Midland Bank of London, lauded Great Britain's managed currency system and stressed certain lasting benefits it would confer at the annual meeting of stockholders of the institution. Donald R. Richberg, in an address early this week in Boston, also described what he regarded as a waning of gold's prestige.

Trade Balance Registers Drop From Last Year

Both American exports and imports were shown by Department of Commerce figures yesterday to have increased in January over December. Exports were 3 per cent higher in January. Usually there is a decline of 4 per cent between the two months. Imports, which had fallen off more than seasonally in December, advanced 26 per cent.

The excess of exports over imports, the so-called favorable trade balance, totaled $9,217,000 in January in comparison with $38,421,000 in December and $36,515,000 in January, 1934.

Exports were valued at $176,223,000 in January compared with $170,673,000 in December and $172,220,000 in January, 1934. Imports aggregated $167,006,000 in comparison with $132,252,000 in December and $135,706,000 in January, 1934.

Bank Clearings In D. C. Double Nation's Figure

Auditorium Corp. to Pay Coupons on First Trust Bonds.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Bank clearings here mounted to a new high for 1935 during the week ended March 6 with an average increase more than twice that reported throughout the United States.

Figures compiled by the Washington Clearing House Association show that the aggregate turnover for the first week of March was $18,939,332.79, an increase of 28.6 per cent over the comparable figure of $14,725,092 reported during the first week of March, 1934.

According to advices received from Dun & Bradstreet, yesterday, the average gain in clearings during the first week of March in the entire United States was but 13.3 per cent ahead of the 1934 total, with $5,947,995,000.

Compared with the previous week, which ended on February 28, clearings in this city showed an increase of 48.2 per cent from the reported total of $12,781,581.87.

Clearings in the United States in the first March week showed a gain of but 28.7 per cent, from the total of $5,248,767,000 reported for the week ended February 28.

Cities Outside New York Up.

Clearings both this year and last cover the heavy monthly settlements incident to the first week of the month. National totals reported were especially heavy at the center outside of New York, running heavier than any week for the past two years at a average gain of 20.2 per cent.

In New York, the leading city of the United States in total turnover, clearings during the week were reported at $4,101,231,000, a gain of 10.5 per cent over the aggregate reported last year.

Gains were especially marked in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati, Richmond, Atlanta, Dallas, St. Louis, Kansas City and Portland.

Auditorium Bonds Draw Interest.

Notices were received yesterday that holders of the Washington Auditorium Corporation first trust bonds, coupon No. 5, will be paid at once.

Bearing the signature of Robert N. Harper, president of the corporation, the notice specified that the bonds will be paid off at the office of the American Security & Trust Co.

The news was received as indicating the corporation financial position to be in much better shape than previously. Payment of interest has been in arrears for several years as the management has encountered great difficulties through the depression years in earning a sufficient amount to take care of operating costs as well as bond interest and retirement.

Built in answer to a long-felt need, the Auditorium was a financial success until Constitution Hall was erected by the D. A. R. Keen competition developed to severely cut into the income of the operating company.

Wall Street Briefs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 7. — In Wall street quarters it is estimated that first quarter earnings of the integrated oil companies east of Pacific Coast will make a less favorable showing than in the first quarter of 1934 in spite of the moderate recovery in petroleum prices from the low levels of the December quarter. Last year's first quarter profits were the best since 1930 for a number of the important units.

The New York Stock Exchange has authorized the listing of $7,000,000 10-year 6 per cent convertible debentures and 2,800,000 shares of common stock of the Studebaker Corporation, the new securities issued in connection with the company's recapitalization.

The National Sugar Manufacturing Co. filed a petition in the Federal Court at Denver yesterday seeking approval of a reorganization plan and a 10-year loan of $225,000 in new operating capital from the RFC. The company operates an 800-ton beet sugar plant at Sugar City, Colo.

In London the American unit was strong at $4.74¾ to the pound, while in New York British balances were quoted ¾ of a cent higher at $4.75⅛.

The dollar was likewise easy in Paris dealings at the equivalent of 6.682 cents to the French franc, but in later transactions in the American market the trend was reversed and the franc lost .00¾ of a cent at 6.67⅛ cents.

Other gold currencies moved downward in New York, led by .13 of a cent decline in guilders at 66.37 cents.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages $6,000,000 Higher

By the Associated Press.

The "excess reserves" of member banks which have assumed the burdensome proportions of about $2,400,000,000 were pared slightly during the week ended March 6, when the reserve account of members topped off $3,000,000. The present level, reported by the general reserves board as $4,555,000,000, is still $1,242,000,000 in excess of last year.

The board's condition statement of the reserve banks showed a further rise of $22,000,000 in monetary gold stocks of the Nation for the week, but an increase of $36,000,000 in money in circulation was held to have no significance due to the heavy withdrawals of funds over the month-end period.

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended March 6, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,459,000,000, an increase of $6,000,000 compared with the preceding week, and a decrease of $100,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

On March 6 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,452,000,000, an increase of $2,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $36,000,000 in money in circulation and $26,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $3,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $22,000,000 in monetary gold stocks and decreases of $33,000,000 in member band reserve balances and of $8,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks.

Relatively small changes were reported in holdings of discounted and purchased bills and of industrial advances. Decreases of $18,000,000 in holdings of United States Treasury notes and $2,000,000 in United States bonds were offset by an increase of $20,000,000 in holdings of Treasury bills.

Changes in the amount of reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended March 6, 1935, were as follows:

Class 1 Rails Net 1.5 Per Cent

The net railway operating income of the Class I railroads in January, 1935, amounted to $2,348,557, which for that month was at the annual rate of return of 1.5 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public today. In January, 1934, their net railway operating income amounted to $31,058,275 or 2.16 per cent on their property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railways, including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

This compilation as to earnings in January is based on reports from 145 Class I railroads representing a total mileage of 238,000.

Gross operating revenues for the month of January amounted to $264,213,172, compared with $258,014,517 in January, 1934, or an increase of 2.4 per cent. Operating expenses in January this year totaled $212,971,508, compared with $195,886,222 in the same month last year, or an increase of 8.7 per cent.

Sixty-one Class I railroads operated at a deficit in January, of which 13 were in the Eastern, 15 in the Southern and 33 in the Western district.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, March 7 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—Texas wools were sharing in the very active demand for fine Western-grown wools in the Boston market. Choice 12 months Texas wools brought around 65 cents, scoured basis, and average lines were selling freely at 61@63 cents. Large weights of the short Texas wools were moving at 58@57 cents, scoured basis, for greasy eight months lines, and at around 50 cents for greasy fall wools.

Federal Issues Trend Lower In Dull Session

Rail Bonds Soft, But Industrials Register Slight Gains.

New York, March 7 (AP).—The downward trend of United States Government securities was resumed in today's bond market but the turnover in this division was considerably under that of the preceding session.

Some $9,370,000 of "Governments" changed hands against a total Wednesday of $15,590,000. Liberty 3½s and First 4¼s managed to emerge with small advances, but the rest of the Federals were down from two-thirty-seconds to thirteen-thirty-seconds of a point. Principal liquidation converged on the low-yield Treasuries and guaranteed issues.

Rails were again the soft spot in the corporation groups. Most of the industrials were about unchanged, but some of the utilities met support for gains of fractions to a point or so. Among these were American Water Works 6s at 72, Columbia Gas 5s at 77, Denver Gas 5s at 105½, Tennessee Electric 6s at 98⅝ and Western Union 4½s at 86⅝.

Foreign obligations were lower, including some of the Columbians, Danish and Polish. Transfers of all bonds amounted to $17,696,000, par value. The Associated Press average for the rails was off .7 of a point.

Only One Locomotive Ordered in 2 Months

New York, March 7.—Railroad equipment builders during the first two months of 1935 received one lone domestic order for one locomotive. Whatever important business the railway equipment industry books in the remainder of 1935 will probably result chiefly from Federal loans, as it did in 1934, for most carriers are still unable to finance large capital improvement expenditures without outside assistance, according to the Standard Statistics Co. of New York.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Amateur night is coming to Washington! WJSV says within a "coupla weeks." Arthur Godfrey is going to direct and manage a local show of new talent, using Roxy's air-spot as a pattern. Eventually Godfrey hopes to sift from the amateurs enough good new talent to use it commercially.

Meanwhile, brush up on the piano breaks, and warble an extra five minutes in the bathtub, so you'll be all ready when the program starts. Prizes will be offered—just what they are WJSV hasn't decided. But this program, to be a weekly half-hour spot, should afford those with radio aspirations a good chance to take a flutter on the air.

Three favorite comedians return to the air today—Joe Cook in a new show, "Circus Night in Silvertown," on WMAL, 10 p. m. and at 10:30 on WJSV Col. Stoopnagle and Budd get down to the ground floor and attempt to revolutionize radio—or something.

Headed by Joe Cook, the circus barker, the Silvertown cast unrolls like a radio hall of fame. Tim and Irene, Phil Duey, Lucy Monroe, Peg La Centra, B. A. Rolf and the Silvertown singers manage to squeeze their respective bits into the 45-minute program.

The Colonel and Budd will form their own company for building and producing radio programs. Says the colonel: "We plan many new ideas. For instance, all winners of sporting events must say, 'Hello, Papa,' mammas have been getting all the billing. We haven't decided on a name yet. Somebody suggested, 'Dead Air, Inc.,' but we didn't hear him."

Benay Venuta, Columbia's new songstress; Jerry Cooper, Mark Warnow and Troubadours will assist the program.

Here and there:

"March of Time" enacts the revolution in Greece, and the abdication of the Siamese King, WJSV, 9 p. m. Another far-away spot is lighted by a dramatization of the findings of Dr. Shapiro, on Pitcairn Island. The life of the English sailors and the Polynesian women has been recorded in a series of novels by Nordhoff and Hall.

Mrs. Roosevelt pays tribute to 11 women who have been successful in business, social service, professions and public affairs, WJSV, 8 p. m.

Robert Montgomery, May Robson and Ruth Gordon are guests at the Hollywood Hotel, WJSV, 9:30 p. m.

N. B. C. Music Appreciation Hour, WRC, 11 a. m., illustrates the use of the cellists, xylophone, drum, castanets and tambourine.

Beatrice Lillie burlesques the sleuths of fiction, WMAL, 9 p. m.

A few statistics on radio survey—if figures don't bore you. Columbia has released the information in cooperation with the efforts of Dr. Daniel Starch, of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co.

The investigation was made by a large staff of field workers through house-to-house interviews with families in every income bracket. Here's the line-up on January 1, 1935:

U. S. Homes with radios	21,435,799
Homes with two or more sets	2,295,770
Automobile radios	1,800,770
Total radio sets	25,551,569
Home radio listeners (average 3.3 per home)	70,804,137

The report is further broken down into charts showing numbers of radios in income and community size groups, and a list of States shows population, radio homes and the percentage ownership. The District of Columbia's figures are as follows:

Number of families	127,400
Radio homes	121,787
Percent ownership	95.6

The District leads in the percentage column by a very nice margin. New York State, with the largest number of families and radio homes, boasts of 89.7 per cent ownership.

Lumber Output Less, Sales Higher

Total lumber production of 15,222,946,000 feet in 1934 is shown on the complete report of production, shipments and gross stocks for that year just issued by the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, the first report of its kind to be put out by the association. Shipments totaled 15,116,380,000 feet, and stocks on hand at the mills are shown at 7,803,366,000 feet as of January 1, 1935, a comparatively small increase above the same figure for the beginning of 1934.

The complete tabulation for the year was made possible through the system of reporting inaugurated by the lumber code. Heretofore the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association has made an estimate each January which very closely anticipated the full report of the United States Census Bureau, usually made in the following fall.

A healthy reduction in stocks on hand since the beginning of the year is indicated by the association's weekly barometer, the latest issue showing that while production during the first eight weeks of the year was 5 per cent above the same period of 1934, both shipments and orders are 30 per cent above those for the preceding year.

Short Interest Decreases.

New York, March 7 (AP).—The short interest on the New York Stock Exchange at the end of February totaled 741,513 shares, the exchange announced today. This was a decrease of 23,341 shares from the outstanding short position on January 31.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Although the strange German craft in the above drawing is primarily a water craft, it also travels by land over parts of its route where no waterway is available. The small steamer operates on the Oberland Canal between Elbing in west Prussia and Deutsch-Eylau in east Prussia. In four places on the line the canal is obstructed by land which, if cut through to make the waterway continuous, would require the building of a score of costly locks.

For this reason the canal steamer was adapted to land travel by rail over those land obstructions. On water it is an ordinary canal boat, but when the end of the canal is reached it runs onto a special railway cradle and is carried out of the water over dry land to the next part of the canal. There it is launched again as a boat to continue its journey.

In medieval Florence when it was decided that the Florentines would wage war on another power, this fact was announced by the ringing of the Battle Bell, also called the Martinella. The bell was started a full month before actual fighting began, and was kept tolling continously.

Although it served to announce an impending war to the Florentine public, it also gave plenty of time to the prospective enemy to prepare for battle. In 1260, after the battle of Monte Aperto, in which the government was overthrown, the bell was cut down and dragged through the streets.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

HEARINGS on the Ramspeck leave bills, H. R. 5152 and 5153, will begin Tuesday, it was decided yesterday by the House Civil Service Committee. The hearings will be held in room 246, Old House Office Building.

BAKER.

Both measures are indorsed by employe organizations. The bill providing for restoration of 30 days' annual leave also provides that overtime shall be compensated with an equivalent time off at a later date. The sick-leave bill provides 15 days' sick leave annually and makes it cumulative, but also permits 30 days' sick leave to be taken before it has accrued, in cases of serious illness or disability.

Reports from headquarters of employe organizations and from the ranks of workers themselves indicate that the question of leave is the most desired reform in Government personnel.

The next important reform, abolition of the efficiency rating system, now appears to have been practically achieved, in view of announcements that the Civil Service Commission has withdrawn its support of the system and will favor automatic promotions.

When hearings on the Sirovich bill resume next week, it is expected that Dr. L. J. O'Rourke, director of research for the commission, will make the attitude of that agency clear with respect to this change in policy.

Alabama Ball Tonight.

Hundreds of Alabamians in government service will gather tonight at the Willard Hotel under auspices of the Alabama Society to honor Gov. and Mrs. Bibb Graves at a banquet, reception and ball. Hugh G. Grant, Division of Western European Affairs, State Department, society president, declares the party will be the most brilliant so far this season.

Plans for an automobile trip through Virginia will be discussed by the District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, at its meeting tonight at the Hamilton Hotel, beginning at 8. John P. Simpson, Interstate Commerce Commission, department secretary, urges each lodge to name a member for the tour committee. The department will meet again March 22.

STREET signs and scenery in California are praised in a letter from Mrs. Nettie E. Crocker, Agriculture, who is visiting her mother in Los Angeles.

"I find it quite easy," writes Mrs. Crocker, "to get around California because of their system of directions at street intersections, and at night in the outlying districts the street signs can be seen from an auto and some are painted on the curb.

"I have often wished that Washington would improve their method of street and number signs on the corners which are so located under the lights that one can not read them while driving."

C. P. DeLong, formerly with Subsistence Homesteads, left this week for Colorado Springs where he has been appointed clerk in the newly opened regional office of Soil Erosion Service. Harry W. Latham, who has been in the Washington office of the Service for over a year, was slated to leave this week to assume new duties as chief clerk of a new project at Huron, S. Dak.

Walt Mason, Himself

Vacant Chair.

MY OLD friend Grimes has gone to rest, by all his country's wishes blest. He thought he'd live a hundred years in this gay world of profiteers, he was so careful what he ate; a meal must hit a certain weight, and have in its component parts the things that nourish human hearts, and make the bloodstream course along as joyously as some sweet song. He talked of vitamins and things of which the diet expert sings; his breakfast was composed of bran, he drank boiled water from a can, and analyzed and parsed the peas, and held an inquest on the cheese. Whatever he designed to chew, must be as pure as morning dew. Like other faddists he was prone to make his theories widely known; he'd stand upon the marketplace and push warm language through his face exhorting all his friends to eat more turnips and less butcher's meat. And oft he'd chide me when we met; "You are too fat, already yet; you weigh some 90 pounds too much, you scarce can walk without a crutch. If you'd adopt my time-tried plan you'd be a strong and healthy man; I know I'll live a hundred years in this bright world of shorthorn steers and you'll keel over some fine day because a half a ton you weigh." So many friends, while passing by, have told me I am billed to die, because I do not join the lads who fall for all the dizzy fads. And now old Grimes has gone to rest, his whiskers folded on his breast, and I remain to weep and rave above his bargain counter grave.

Plans for Camp Will Come Up At Scout Parley

Annual Election Will Be Held at C. M. O. Meeting Tomorrow.

Plans for the coming season at Camp Roosevelt will be discussed tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in the Y. M. C. A. Assembly Hall when the C. M. O. (Camp Roosevelt's Honor Tribe) will meet for the annual election. President Harry Barnett announces a full program, including music and moving pictures showing the activities of beavers. This exceptional picture has been provided by Vernon Bailey, of the Smithsonian Institution, and will be described by him.

The Sea Scout ship Corinthian, under the leadership of Frederick Tilp, will give a demonstration of the breeches buoy in operation Sunday afternoon at 2:30 off Hains Point. The Sea Scouts will bring their sailing ship within a few hundred feet of the sea wall, where it will be anchored and a shore crew will shoot a line aboard which will be fastened to the mast, following which members of the crew will be brought ashore in a breeches buoy.

Quarterly Court of Award.

At the Powell Junior High School March 23 the quarterly court of award of the District of Columbia Council will be held. At this time all Scouts attaining the ranks of star, life and eagle and those earning palms will receive the awards. Many special awards will also be made, including certificates for progress in better appearance, training certificates, a scouter's training award to District Commissioner Richard Rule, and scoutmaster's keys to Virgil Howard, of Troop 12, and Frederick Tilp, skipper of the Corinthian Sea Scout ship. A court of honor will be held tomorrow at the Powell School. All applications for the eagle award are expected at headquarters by tomorrow, and for other awards by March 19.

An additional sheet of merit badge counselors will be sent to the field next week. These additions put the merit badge counselor group at the highest point it has been for years. However, experts are still needed in a few subjects, including machinery, leather work, safety, wood carving, conservation, carpentry and metal work.

Training Committee to Meet.

The council training committee is scheduled to meet at headquarters Thursday to make additional plans for the year's training program. The great influx of new men in leadership capacities in the council this year has made it necessary to revise and add to the program already arranged. The training of 1,000 guides, which is also part of the responsibility of the training committee, will be taken up. This work will be done in cooperation with the Eagle Scout Association, which, through its president, Richard Miller, has named a jamboree committee composed of the following Eagle Scouts: Howard Jeans, Jo V. Morgan, jr., Ernest Smallings, Richard P. Ellinger, John J. Amante and John J. Kimball. This committee will meet tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. at headquarters to set up the preliminary training course.

News of divisional and troop activities is being received at headquarters in small amounts, and it has been pointed out that there are many important happenings that are not reported. It is therefore suggested that each division and troop appoint news representatives. Many troops and divisions are now doing this through their publications, such as the Redskin Divisional Bulletin and the following troop papers: The Axe, Troop 79; Pulse, Troop 70; Council Fire, Troop 100; The Frying Pan, Troop 40; The Skillet, Troop 8; Mess Shack, Troop 69; Tepee, Troop 82; The Banner, Troop 252; The Arrow Head, Troop 72; The Pioneer, Troop 43; The Cabin, Troop 235; Canteen, Troop 89, and The Tenderfoot, Troop 54.

An enthusiastic group of scouters in Fairfax County meets each Tuesday evening for training in scoutmastership at the Fairfax County Building. About 25 men are enrolled for the course and the attendance is fine.

The district commissioners from the 19 divisions of Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia will hold their monthly meeting at the home of the commissioner, Dr. Camp Stanley, 2370 Massachusetts avenue, next Monday.

Jamboree Patrol Contest.

The Southwest Division, under acting Commissioner Martin Naiman, is starting in a cross-country jamboree patrol contest in which each patrol is placed on a map along the West Coast. Points given for various accomplishments, both patrol and individual, move them along their route toward Washington. The contest ends in Washington in time for the jamboree.

Arlington County troops will be inspected tonight for the certificate of progress and better appearance.

A group of Scouts from Troop 8 has made an early spring trip to Camp Livingstone on the Potomac, where they made considerable progress on the construction of their new press club building. Thirteen Scouts made the trip with Scoutmaster Westlake and Troop Committeeman Yule Fisher.

Troop 8 will hold its annual banquet March 23 at the Kennedy-Warren.

Scoutmaster W. C. Cronenburg, of Troop 14, announces that Camp Jennings on the Potomac River near Great Falls will be opened as a troop camp for the entire summer with Edward Eberly as camping director. A new swimming hole is being built.

Wanderbirds Turn to Virginia For Sunday Hike to Quarries

Dr. H. N. Stokes to Lead Group; New Group to Visit Towpath.

By Robert Shosteck.

The Wanderbirds on Sunday will ramble through the nearby Virginia countryside, hiking from Barcroft to the old Triadelphia Mill and thence up the scenic Holmes Run ravine to the Alexandria reservoir and the quarries close by. This seven-mile hike will be led by Dr. H. N. Stokes, veteran hiker.

Club members and Post readers planning to go on this trip should make bus reservations by 9 a. m. Sunday at National 4200. The round-trip fare will be 35 cents. Buses will leave the Post Building at 10 a. m., provided that not too many forget to phone in their reservations. Hikers are advised to bring along lunch and a cup for coffee. We shall return to The Post Building by 6 p. m. at the latest.

The trail begins on a hill just beyond Barcroft and follows the wooded slope of Four-Mile Run valley for a mile to Lucky Run. On the hill to the left are Forts Garesche and Reynolds, which were visited on a hike several months ago.

We follow the left branch of this stream, along a woods road and across the Leesburg turnpike. The trail continues southwestward across Old Fort road and Seminary road. About one-half mile from the last crossing, at the foot of a hill beyond the automobile graveyard, the road turns left, close by a white farmhouse. A fine spring is located nearby, as shown on map.

Following this road toward Little River road, the group will pass the old Leadbeater mansion, the home of Alexandria's most famous druggist, who, it will be recalled, compounded prescriptions for the Washington family. The last member of this family actively in the drug business died recently. The many historically valuable records and fixtures were sold at auction.

The ruins of the old Triadelphia Mill, burned down about two years ago, stand at the juncture of Little River road and Holmes Run. The trail up the run is through open meadow and is rather uninteresting for about a half mile. The trail ends at an old woods road which parallels a ditch. Dr. Stokes believes that this ditch is a Civil War trench, even though it looks very much like a millrace. A fine spring is located about a half mile from this ditch.

bank of Holmes Run all the way to the great reservoir dam near the Columbia pike. The entire length of the ravine is wooded and very steep. The hikers will visit two old quarries which stand on a hill to the left, about a quarter of a mile from the highway. A large stone mill still stands on the right bank of the stream. It has not been in use for many years.

A campfire will be built on the hillside overlooking the reservoir and coffee will be served.

The recently organized Department of Agriculture Hiking Club plans a trip up the towpath Sunday, starting from the end of the Cabin John car line at 1 p. m. This 5-mile trip wil include coffee and a campfire. Rudolph Gustafson, hike leader, invites all U. S. D. A. employes to join his group. The hikers will return to Cabin John by 5:30 p. m.

* * * *

The Red Triangle Outing Club will meet Sunday at Seventeenth street and New York avenue for their hike along the shore of Lake Jackson near Occoquan Creek at Maassas, Va. The transportation fee will be 35 cents. Dallas Talbert will lead this scenic 8-mile trip.

The Biological Society announces an illustrated lecture on the ferns of the District of Columbia by Dr. J. E. Benedict. This talk, together with a 45-minute account of the technique of catching and training hawks for hunting, will be given in the assembly hall of the Cosmos Club tomorrow evening at 8:15. The public is invited.

U. S. Still Raiders Now 'Shoot' With Cameras

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., March 7.—Federal agents raiding moonshine stills in Kentucky now do their "shooting" with cameras.

The cameras, now standard equipment of the "revenuers," are used in taking pictures of stills at the time of seizure and after they are demolished.

The pictures form a part of the Department's official record in each case.

Dominican Republic Extends Diplomacy

The Dominican Republic is to be represented in all American nations, Emilio Garcia Godoy, first secretary of the legation here, announced yesterday.

In making public the reorganization of the country's diplomatic service, Godoy said the action was being taken by President Trujillo Molina of the tiny island republic, in the spirit of "true Pan-Americanism."

Three Virginians Aiding Battle Against Black 'Plague' in China

Thousands Die Like Flies as Epidemic Rages in Kiangsu Area.

By the Associated Press.

Haichow, Kiangsu Province, China, March 7.—A baffling Oriental scourge—black fever—which comes from nowhere to wipe out whole villages, was ravaging large areas in this coastal province today.

As American men and women medical missionaries rallied every resource to cope with the emergency, thousands were dying like flies for want of adequate hospital resources.

The disease, curable if scientifically treated in time, affected an area of 25,000 square miles in which 5,000,000 Chinese live.

Working furiously against time, the American Southern Presbyterian Mission here, under the direction of Dr. John S. Reed, jr., of Richmond, Va., and the American Mission Hospital at Tsingkiangpu, 100 miles to the southwest, where three other American physicians were fighting the epidemic, have converted school buildings into emergency hospitals. The Americans at Tsingkiangpu were James B. Woods, of Charlottesville, Va.; Nelson Hall, of Waynesboro, Va., and Paul K. Gieser, of Highland Park, Ill.

Elsewhere in the disease area were other medical missionaries exerting every effort to stem the tide of the epidemic. Two women doctors, Nettie Grier, of Greenville, Pa., and Gladys Smithwick, of Henderson, N. C., were in charge of the overcrowded women's hospital at Suchofu.

Few victims, in proportion to the uncounted thousands of sufferers, could be cared for in the American institutions, however, due to their limited facilities. Chinese private "hospitals" springing up through the distressed area only add to the death toll, missionaries said, by using unscientific methods.

Medical men here and in research institutions elsewhere in the Orient continued their efforts to answer the riddle of how black fever—or kala-azar as it is also called—is transmitted from person to person.

● Washington has not been a bed of roses this winter. Especially for thousands in the Government Service. Extraordinary problems galore. Weighty decisions on the calendar every day. Naturally, with the eyes of the country riveted on official Washington, the strain has been severe for many.

● Here's a good bit of advice for you men in public life. Say goodbye to the mid-winter let-down . . . try the perfect pick-up . . . a smartly-patterned Saxon-weave Suit in a gay spring coloring.

● Next to a Mediterranean cruise, the addition of a Saxon-weave suit is the ideal way to greet spring.

● You don't have to be a professor of psychology to know that a new suit of smart springlike design with the inimitable Saxon-weave styling will give you a more cheerful point of view.

● Remember, too, Saxon-weave is a new achievement in worsted quality. Saxon-weave is the kind of worsted that seldom needs pressing and doesn't get shiny.

● Drop in tomorrow . . . it won't take us long to prove our point. $30

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES
Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vim
Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.
If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . an old prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.
